'THE EAST IS RED' SINGS RED SATELLITE

China Rockets Into Space Club

Times News Services

HONG KONG — China announced today the launching of its first earth satellite and it is circling the earth every 114 minutes.

The North American Air Defence Command headquarters in Colorado Springs, Col., confirmed the launch and said the satellite is flying regularly over the United States.

The launch indicated China now has the capability of building and delivering intercontinental ballistic missiles.

A brief communique from Peking said the satellite was launched Friday and it is playing a recorded revolutionary song "The East is Red" as it circles around the world.

With the successful launch, China joins the United States, Russia, France and Japan in the space club. Canada has orbitted satellites but only by using American-made rockets.

★

China became the world's fifth nuclear power in 1964 and test-fired its first nuclear-tipped guided missile Oct. 27, 1966. Its first H-bomb test was carried out June 17, 1967.

The official New China News Agency said the 381-pound satellite broadcasts its music at a frequency of 20.009 megacycles.

The agency said the satellite's orbit ranges from 273 miles to 1,480 miles above the earth at an angle to the equator of 68.5 degrees.

"The successful launching of the satellite marks a good beginning in the development of China's space technology," the agency added. "It is a great victory for Mao Tse-tung thought ... and another fruitful result of the great cultural revolution."

The announcement of the launching gave no further technical details, nor did it say where the satellite was launched or with what type rocketry.

★

The launching is likely to add to worries in the West over China's already known capability to produce nuclear weapons. The question for some time has been how the Chinese would deliver them to a target.

The words of the satellite's song, familiar on Radio Peking, are:

The East is red. The sun rises,

Mao Tse-tung comes out in the East.

He works for the well-being of the people.

He is the great savior of the people.

Chairman Mao, he loves the people.

He is the man leading our way.

He leads us forward.

The Communist party is like the sun.

It brightens where it shines.

When China has the Communist party, her people are liberated.

EX-TAX INVESTIGATOR GUILTY OF EVASION

MONTREAL (CP) — J. Raoul Lacombe, 48, former chief investigator in Montreal for the federal income tax branch, Friday was sentenced to six months in jail for tax evasion.

Lacombe, with 23 years' service in the tax department, was sentenced by Judge Maurice Rousseau for failing to declare his income properly over a six-year period.

He is free on $1,000 bond pending appeal.

Evidence established he had under-reported $11,813 income on his returns from 1961 to 1966.

GUNDERSON ROLE?

B.C. Firm Said Fighting Grab

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Friday that directors of NWL Financial Corporation are trying to prevent a Bahamas-based firm from taking over the Vancouver company.

Einar Gunderson, Social Credit party fund-raiser and long-time friend of Premier Bennett, is one of those attempting to prevent a takeover, Peterson said in an interview.

Peterson said there is no connection between Gunderson and the Bahamas company.

The government was aware that Residential Resort Development Ltd. had bought into NWL prior to Opposition Leader Dave Barrett's disclosure of the move Thursday, Peterson said.

'NOT SISTER'

The attorney-general appeared to deny Barrett's description of Residential Resort as a "sister company" of Consolidated Benguet Corp., the Bahamas company declared unacceptable in the Cypress Bowl development by Peterson.

Barrett had raised the question of whether an attempt was being made to turn NWL into a "front" company to take over from Benguet in the development of leased crown land in the West Vancouver bowl.

Peterson also dismissed Barrett's call for a judicial inquiry into the controversial recreational development which mushroomed into a huge residential proposal when Benguet took over a B.C. company last fall to become the developers.

The development was suspended by the government Nov. 26 after a storm of controversy over Benguet's reputation which was clouded by a 1967 Bahamian royal commission investigation indicating the company's involvement in payoffs to government officials in connection with casino operations.

Peterson said his department has full details of the organizational structure of Residential Resort as a result of that company's application in February to the U.S. Securities Commission.

Benguet isn't involved in this matter," Peterson said of the NWL case.

He said he had a meeting Wednesday with Peter G. Ropchan, president of NWL Financial Corporation, on the subject of the acquisition of 38 per cent of NWL shares by the Freepont firm.

On the question of Gunderson's directorship in NWL, Peterson said:

STILL NO SPOTS ON MATTINGLY

HOUSTON (AP) — The man who was taken off the Apollo 13 moon flight because of an exposure to the German measles never came down with the disease, doctors said today.

Thomas K. Mattingly, the prime command module pilot on Apollo 13, was forced off the flight a day before launch because he was exposed to the German measles by a backup crew member.

'Secret' Towboat Report Condemns Vessels, Crews

VANCOUVER (CP) — A federal government report on the British Columbia towboat industry says 80 per cent of west coast tugboats and half the men who man them are constantly exposed to unsatisfactory and dangerous conditions.

Copies of the report, plainly labelled "secret" on its front cover, were released Friday night to reporters by members of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, which obtained access to it earlier in the week.

It was prepared by four federal civil servants: R. H. Elfstrom, B. W. Dodd, and D. S. Tysoe of the labor department and H. O. Buchanan of the transport department.

50 VESSELS

The committee surveyed 50 vessels of the 313 operated by British Columbia Towboat Owners' Association member companies. Its report comprises 26 pages plus 14 pages of appendices, but does not name individual companies or vessels.

The report is critical of working conditions, inadequate living conditions on vessels and badly or inadequately trained crews operating in conditions of carelessness condoned by masters.

It cites as contributing to dangerous operation: excessive hours, unsafe practices, inadequate crew quarters, poor feeding and sanitary arrangements, and dangers arising from basically unsafe design of some tugboats.

The investigators looked at towboats in three categories: under 10 tons, 10 to 15 tons, over 15 tons. They said the danger to crews decreased as the size of the tugs rose.

Officers and crew members on two- to five-man vessels, particularly to those operating on the Strait of Georgia, frequently work from 14 to 18 hours a day, "and often up to 20 hours a day with the remaining time broken into several short off-duty periods."

HAITI MUTINY BID REPORTED QUELLED

DUVALIER
... palace shelled

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — President Francois Duvalier claimed today that a mutiny in the Haitian Coast Guard was "completely under control" but he kept the airport closed in the island nation's capital city and refused telephone calls from the United States.

The airport was closed and telephone communications shut down Friday after mutineers fired on the capital from three coast guard vessels.

The coast guard vessels apparently tried to shell Duvalier's palace. One person was injured and several homes damaged, the government said.

Ottawa Joins Quebec Fray

Polls Show Separatists Gaining

Times News Services

QUEBEC—The federal government entered Quebec's election campaign through the back door Friday, spurred to action by the spectre of significant separatist gains in next Wednesday's balloting.

A newsletter, published by the Quebec wing of the Liberal Party of Canada and clearly inspired if not written by Ottawa, was distributed Friday. It indicates that Quebec derives more from confederation than it contributes.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who outwardly has avoided entry into the Quebec campaign, is believed to feel that the apparent rise of the separatist Parti Quebecois is based more on a protest against existing conditions than on any wave of true separatist feeling.

But newspaper polls published this week take some of the credulity from that stance.

MOMENTUM SEEN

Results of separate surveys published today in three Montreal papers, while discounted by some observers as not likely to reflect next week's vote results accurately, do show the separatist movement is gaining momentum.

All three show Robert Bourassa's Liberal party taking the largest segment of the popular vote, followed closely by Rene Levesque's Parti Quebecois. And all placed the Union Nationale government party third, in a position the Montreal Star describes as "close to political collapse."

OUTWARD CALM

One reason for Ottawa's outward calm about the turn of public feeling in Quebec reportedly is the prime minister's contention that this election is not a clear-cut referendum on separatism.

And another is the very plausible belief that a direct entry into the campaign by Ottawa could damage the

GRITS HAND OUT 'LEVESQUE BUCK'

MONTREAL (CP) — A separatist dollar has been put into circulation by the Liberals.

The dollar bill, known in French as "la piastre a Levesque"—the Levesque buck—has been published by the Liberal election organization in Chambly riding.

The Levesque buck is the same color as a Canadian dollar bill but it is about one-third blank to indicate the price of separation.

The Queen's portrait has been replaced by a sketch of Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois.

Trapped Cambodians Fight Red Advance

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Hand-to-hand fighting raged around the important Cambodian highway town of Angtassom, 42 miles south of Phnom Penh today and a military spokesman said a Communist attack was repulsed.

Cambodian soldiers there said 10 of their number were killed and eight wounded.

Communist units are between the Cambodian troops and the town, in which a reinforced Cambodian battalion is trapped.

The fighting in Angtassom threatens Takeo, a provincial capital six miles to the southeast, which has been under siege for nearly a week.

Meanwhile, Cambodian navy landing boats began towing about 100 houseboats down the Bassac River southeast of Phnom Penh with the Vietnamese occupants aboard. Police told the Vietnamese they would be taken to a safer area.

Israelis Bombed By Egypt, Syria

Times News Services

Both Egyptian and Syrian planes were active today in the Middle East.

A flight of Egyptian bombers penetrated to within 90 miles of Tel Aviv, only the second time since the 1967 war that they have hit so close to the Israeli capital. Four Syrian planes attacked an emplacement on the occupied Golan Heights.

A Tel Aviv spokesman said Israeli interceptors shot down two Egyptian Ilyushin 28s, first of their kind downed since Middle East hostilities began.

Rebel Trinidad Troops Handing In Weapons

PORT OF SPAIN (AP) — Rebel Trinidad troops began handing over their weapons today under terms of an agreement reached with the government of Trinidad-Tobago, police officials announced.

The dissident soldiers, who mutinied during rioting over Black Power demands on this island off Venezuela, now are under the authority of Col. Joffre Serrette, 54, the new commander of the 720-man army.

The acting police commissioner said the mutiny had nothing to do with the Black Power movement. He said it was caused by dissatisfaction with conditions in the army.

JOHNSON RESIGNS

Friday night, the government named Serrette to replace Col. Stanley Johnson, who resigned, possibly under government pressure. At the same time, the government asked that foreign ships standing by off Trinidad leave the area. It said the situation was "well under control."

Serrette stepped down as commander of the army in 1968. He has been negotiating for the government with mutinous soldiers trapped in the army headquarters six miles from Port of Spain by a cordon of police and loyal troops.

About 50 rebels at the base were believed holding some 30 hostages, said Maj. Henry Christopher, the army's second in command and one of six hostages released by the rebels Thursday night.

FOUR KILLED

Acting Police Commissioner Tony May said the mutiny, which started Tuesday, was "still a bit tricky." He said 79 of the rebels had surrendered to police.

May said four persons were killed in shooting and firebombing incidents and that $70,000 worth of property had been damaged since the riots started after the arrest of a group of Black Power leaders during the upheaval sparked by unemployment and economic discontent.

May said 70 persons were in police custody, including 17 Black Power leaders.

The communique announcing that foreign ships had been asked to leave mentioned no nationalities. But five U.S. Navy vessels have been standing by off the coast in case it became necessary to remove American citizens. The communique said foreign ships would not be permitted to send assistance to protect their nationals.

The United States flew a planeload of light arms to the Trinidad-Tobago government Wednesday night, but the state department said there were no plans to send any more. Venezuela sent a small plane with a consignment of weapons for the government.

. . . TOWBOATS

The committee found that "unsafe work practices, including failure to use protective equipment," are common in all types of operation and vessels, "occurring with increased frequency as the size of the vessel decreases. . . ."

INEFFECTIVE

"There is considerable evidence of crews following unsafe ship naviagation practices and rendering ship safety equipment ineffective," said the report.

"Unguarded machinery and unsafe condition of tools and equipment are commonly apparent on all types of vessels. Crew members frequently expose themselves needlessly to hazardous conditions, within sight of their master or mate, who in turn either do not recognize the hazard or fail to take any corrective action."

LIFEJACKETS

The report says that at least 40 per cent of crew members do not wear lifejackets, others wear them incorrectly, and at least 10 per cent of the lifejackets are unserviceable in any event.

Among the unsafe practices cited: tugs observed operating in fog with only one man in the wheelhouse; watertight doors open on 90 per cent of vessels under way; generally inoperable firefighting equipment on towboats under 15 tons; 90 per cent of the boats do not have regular fire drills and most crew members don't know how to use the emergency equipment.

The report says there is no evidence of formal job training by the industry, nor of efforts to update the knowledge of masters and mates.

Trinidadian Chief Keeps Balance

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (Reuters) — Prime Minister Eric Williams, 58, has often been at the centre of controversy.

But until the current Black Power crisis hit the tourist-oriented islands of Trinidad and Tobago, the stocky, quiet-spoken government leader maintained a 14-year rule over a delicately balanced mixture of races with few signs of trouble.

Of African extraction, Williams fought and won elections in 1956 at the head of his newly-formed People's National Movement. His election campaign was largely waged on a platform calling for a better deal for the sugar workers.

The sugar workers are largely of East Indian stock, an element which comprises over 35 per cent of the population. About 40 per cent is Negro and 18 per cent of mixed race. The remainder are whites, Chinese and Lebanese-Syrian.

Many new factories were attracted to Trinidad because of Williams' generous tax concessions to foreign investors. Political opponents have seized upon this to criticize him for permitting foreign financial groups to exert undue influence on the country.

SOURCE OF TROUBLE

Much of the current trouble is directed towards foreign-owned industries, particularly the sugar industry. Black Power militants have threatened to drive out such foreign companies and give the lands to the sugar workers—claiming they are the rightful owners.

Williams became the first prime minister of Trinidad and Tobago when it was granted independence from Britain within the Commonwealth in 1962.

He has often clashed with fellow West Indian leaders over such issues as the abortive West Indies federation, which collapsed when Jamaica pulled out in 1961, and the Caribbean free trade area agreement, which Jamaica declined to join.

But despite this, his strong interest in West Indian affairs in general and his honesty and integrity have earned him the respect of other Caribbean leaders.

In 1964, he was invited to mediate in a racial conflict raging in British Guiana—now Guyana—by Cheddi Jagan, then its premier. Recently Williams was reported to have assumed the role of peace ambassador in the long-standing border disputes between Guyana and neighboring Surinam and Venezuela.

BRILLIANT SCHOLAR

Williams was a brilliant scholar before turning to politics, having studied at Oxford University from where he graduated in 1932 with first-class honors and a bachelor of arts degree in history and political science.

He also taught at Howard University at Washington, D.C., from 1939 to 1948, eventually becoming professor of political science.

He is the author of several histories and other works about the West Indies. He earned his doctor of philosophy degree in 1938 with a controversial thesis entitled Capitalism and Slavery, arguing that Britain freed the West Indian slaves more for economic than for humanitarian reasons.

Williams has been married three times and has a daughter, Erica, by his second marriage.

Students Riot

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (Reuters) — Thousands of angry students stormed the national legislature here Friday night and hundreds of persons were injured in a pitched battle with the country's pocket-sized police force. They were protesting a legislature-approved contract giving the Aluminum Co. of America exploitation rights to bauxite deposits in southern Costa Rica.

. . . QUEBEC ELECTION

provincial Liberals' chances of victory.

Ottawa's entry via the Friday newsletter drew quick condemnation from both the Union Nationale and the Parti Quebecois.

'DISHONORABLE'

"We stayed at home in 1968 during the last federal election; why don't they stay home now?" said Quebec Finance Minister Mario Beaulieu, director of the Union Nationale campaign.

Levesque was blunter, calling the federal involvement a "dishonorable intervention."

He made the attack at three meetings which attracted about 6,500 people from seven ridings, saying Ottawa treats Quebec "like a bunch of embeciles." The federal newsletter, he said, overestimates federal spending and underestimates federal revenues in the province.

It stated that Quebec gets $1,000,000,000 more per year from Ottawa than it pays in taxes, that the federal government spent $151,500,000 in unemployment insurance benefits for 1968-69, and that it paid $261,000,000 in salaries to employees of federal crown corporations in Quebec. It also lists $441,000,000 in federal contributions to Quebec involving health and welfare for 1968-69.

'IGNORE SURVEYS'

Meanwhile Premier Bertrand urged his supporters to ignore the published opinion surveys because the newspapers "want the death of the Union Nationale."

He predicted in Montreal Friday night that "the people will cast a massive vote in favor of the Union Nationale."

La Presse says its survey indicates the following breakdown: Liberal 24 per cent; Parti Quebecois 19; Union Nationale 10; Creditiste 10; New Democratic Party 1; others 1; undecided 35.

Its telephone survey of 1,377 voters in six Quebec regions was conducted between April 15 and 20.

The Gazette gave the Liberals 32 per cent; Parti Quebecois 23; Union Nationale 15; Creditiste 9; NDP and others 1; undecided 19.

Its survey of 820 voters was conducted during the week of April 13-18.

NO FIGURES

The Star survey of 507 voters, conducted this week in four regions, says the Liberals are in the lead but does not give over-all figures for the popular vote. It shows the Liberals leading in three regions and the Parti Quebecois ahead in Terrebonne riding north of Montreal. In the last four Quebec elections, Terrebonne sent to the legislature a member belonging to the winning party.

The three parties contesting all 108 ridings—Liberal, Parti Quebecois and Union Nationale—were also ranked in that order in two surveys published a week ago in La Presse and Quebec Le Soleil.

Both the Star and Gazette surveys report that Quebec voters, including many supporters of the Parti Quebecois, reject the idea of separating from Canada.

The Gazetter says only 14 per cent of all Quebecers and only half the Parti Quebecois supporters, favor separating from Canada both politically and economically. The Star does not provide an over-all figure, but says 30.8 per cent of the Parti Quebecois supporters surveyed in the Montreal area are opposed to separation.

Stolen Birds Worth $300

Four pigeons valued at a total $300 were stolen Friday night from an aviary at the home of Gordon Lovitt, 1178 Beach Drive.

Lovitt, who is offering a $100 reward for the birds' return, says the haul included a rare pair of white Jacobin pigeons. The others were a yellow cock and a red hen.

Election Colors July 1 Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — With a couple of gloomy asides about next week's Quebec election, the Commons Friday debated whether Dominion Day should be renamed Canada Day or Confederation Day.

David Anderson (L—Esquimault-Saanich), supporting Dominion Day, said it is a Canadian term that calls to mind the obstacles overcome in forming confederation.

It might be well to remember past difficulties at a time when some separatists were almost certain to be elected, Mr. Anderson said.

"The present difficulties and present prospects for the election next week of people convinced that Canada is not a viable country and should not continue to exist are perhaps minor difficulties compared to those faced by our people a century ago," he added.

Michael Forrestall (PC—Daremouth-Halifax East) said it is dangerous to chip away at "things which are meaningful to most of us." The Dominion of Canada was more than the sum of its parts.

"It is manifesting itself this week in the fear, rightly or wrongly, of whether we will have a country a week from today," Mr. Forrestall said.

COMMITTEE HANDLED

James Brown (L—Brantford) presented a public bill in February to change the name Dominion Day to Canada Day. The commons justice committee amended it to read Confederation Day.

When the bill was reported to the House Friday, Colin Gibson (L — Hamilton-Wentworth) moved an amendment changing the title back to Canada Day.

A Conservative attempt to have Mr. Brown's bill dropped to the bottom of a long list, in effect killing it, was prevented by Government House Leader Donald Macdonald.

"The unfortunate thing about this story (about Barrett's statements) is that Mr. Gunderson and others are trying to stop these people from coming in."

Peterson said the directors can't stop individual shareholders from selling out to the Bahamian company and reported that Ropchan had made clear none of the shares had been acquired from NWL's treasury.

Gunderson "is in no way connected with these people" Peterson said of the Bahamian firm.

Asked if he was satisfied there would be no takeover of NWL and its subsidiary company, Federated Investments Ltd., Peterson said:

"They (directors) are doing their best to see there isn't any takeover" and added that "the matter is well in hand with the securities branch of the government."

Peterson said he wasn't going to comment on a judicial inquiry just because "a fellow by the name of Barrett asked for one . . ."

CAN RUN SHOW

"I think we can run this department quite well without his help or hindrance, thank you," Peterson said.

Peterson would not elaborate on his statement that Benguet isn't involved in the NWL matter.

Barrett charged Thursday that Residential Resort Development Ltd. is a sister company of Benguet. He said Louis Chesler controls Residential Resort through shareholdings, although he is not a director of the firm. His son Allan Chesler of Toronto is a director.

Barrett described Chesler as the partner of Wallace Groves, central figure in Benguet. Both men figured prominently in a royal commission investigation of gambling casinos, payoffs to government officials and organized crime activities in the Bahamas in 1967.

SQUAMISH RIVER POISON SUSPECTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Fish and Wildlife Branch said Friday it is not closing the Squamish River to fishing at present but advised that no fish caught in the river should be eaten until tests on fish from the area are complete.

The upper portions of nearby Howe Sound and part of the river were closed to fishing this week by the federal fisheries department because of mercury pollution.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Old Jeff is a retired cowboy who has an opinion about nearly everything. If he doesn't know anything about a subject, he will go to somebody and get information that will let him voice an opinion. His latest idea is connected to the weather and his teeth.

Jeff has about half of his teeth, and that's pretty good at his age. He had a toothache one day and went to his dentist. Jeff poked his gnarled old finger way back in his mouth to show the dentist where it ached. The doctor probed the filling in the aching tooth and there was no cavity.

"Which proves," said Jeff, "that the weather can make your teeth ache. What happens is that a tiny air space between the tooth and the filling reacts to the barometric pressure. When the pressure falls, the air space volume changes and you get a hell of a pain. When the sun comes out, the pain disappears."

INSIDE CITY HALL

We Love Spokesmen . . . But They Should Always Be Right!

By JIM HUME

The "spokesman" is one of the most useful tools a newspaper reporter has.

But only when he's accurate.

When he is unreliable he can be a disaster area.

This week we have been treated to the disclosures of a "spokesman" who announced via The Daily Colonist that when the Rockland Avenue zoning report comes out it could possibly see a number of low-rise apartment buildings permitted in the area.

Hume

Spokesmen who make such brave statements while remaining anonymous are always suspect. And this particular spokesman, if he exists at all, is more suspect than most.

★ ★ ★

The Rockland Avenue report, when it is finally published, will not recommend low-rise apartments.

It will recommend that no new apartments be permitted in the Rockland area, low-rise, medium rise or any other rise.

Which would indicate that one informed source at city hall should check his fact sheet before assuming the role of "spokesman" for a report which to this date remains in draft form only.

When Peter Pollen was elected alderman last December there was a general cheer in civic circles.

True he was an unknown quantity as far as civic administration was concerned. But he had an excellent and successful business background, and he was well educated and articulate.

The combination isn't always easy to find in the world of politics.

It has to be somewhat of a disappointment then to find Pollen, after only four months in office, already suffering from that old political complaint diagnosed as "instant expert opinion."

★ ★ ★

We all know the truth of the adage that a political campaign is a war in which everybody shoots from the lip. But usually, once the dust of that battle has settled, the new-elected politicain declares a moratorium on words until he finds his way around the wonderful maze of public affairs.

It has been said that some politicians can talk in circles while standing four square. Unfortunately, and regrettably, Pollen has been talking that way for the past few weeks.

POLLEN
. . . potential there

A few days ago he called for what he termed participatory planning to give the people more say in the development of their environment.

Fine words, Appealing words to the general public. But not very practical.

Does this mean that planning should be left just to professional planners and to heck with the people? No.

But had Pollen taken the time and trouble to review existing planning organizations he would have discovered that the entire area is already top-heavy — from hired hands to volunteers — with the blueprint artists.

★ ★ ★

Here is a partial list:

There are planning departments in Victoria and Saanich.

There are Advisory Planning Commissions in Oak Bay, Saanich and Victoria and a planning committee in Sidney.

The four planning areas of the Regional District, stretching from Jordan River out into the Gulf Islands, each has an Advisory Planning Commission.

The regional board itself has a planning department. It also has a planning subcommittee

The provincial government has a planning branch plus the Capital Improvement District Commission.

Then there's the Community Planning Association of Canada, Capital Region Branch.

Added to and interwoven between that formidable list are local zoning sub-committees, local planning subcommittees and, heaven forbid, sub-sub-committees, plus mandatory public hearings prior to zoning changes.

And they are all comprised of people, in and out of the political mainstream.

Peter Pollen could emerge from his two years on city council as one of the strongest political voices to be heard around these parts for years.

He has the brain, the personality, the ability and the vocabulary. All he needs to learn is that, as an elected official, he has dozens of people at his disposal to provide him with facts and figures before he speaks. Once he learns to test his ideas on the experts on his team before sallying forth into battle, he will be a force to be reckoned with at any political level.

Concert to Sum Up Festival

By AUDREY JOHNSON

After two weeks of concentrated music making at many levels, the Victoria Music Festival will be summarized tonight in the traditional highlights concert at McPherson Playhouse.

The standard of this concert, in which award winners and other outstanding performers will take part, promises to be exceptional.

But what is even more impressive is the fact that there were probably three times as many notable performances in the festival as could be fitted into a two-hour program.

The youngest artists in tonight's concert are aged 10 and eight.

They are the violin-cello prodigies from North Vancouver, Gwen and Desmond Hoebig.

Next youngest is 13-year-old Kim Cattrall of Comox, the dramatically promising speech arts multiple winner.

In keeping with the Beethoven bicentenary theme of the 1970 festival, the program will open with pianist Mary Chard, winner of the under 19 concerto class, the junior section of the special bicentenary classes and the organ accompaniment class, playing the Beethoven Rondo, Op. 51, No. 1.

Beethoven's Appassionata Sonata, the first movement, will close the program. Brilliant 18-year-old Lawrence Brown is the pianist.

Congress of Strings winner Jacqueline Tarry, accompanied by Robin Wood, will play the first two movements of Brahms' Violin Sonata in A major.

Rose Bowl winner, mezzo soprano Evelyn Westinghouse, and Victoria City Medallion winner Susan de Burgh, flutist Chris Salm, violinist Nancy Meredith and young soprano Jennifer Angus are on the program.

Also James Kennedy, the recorder player who amazed adjudicator Dr. Frank Gamble; French hornist Geoffrey Pearce, accordionist Rolf Gilstein and the Amity Singers, winners Friday night of the CBC choir award.

An original composition for two violins and two cellos by 17-year-old Bruce Turkington will be played by Steve Calder, Brian Nisbet, Bruce Turkington and Dave Night.

On Friday night the speech arts section staged its own honor performance. The program concluded with a competition for a bursary award won by Marie Stillin.

Taking part in the honor program were St. Patrick's School speech choir, Kathy Groves, Vincent Winstanley, Fiona Roots, David Bertoia, Libby and David McMinn, Nona Avren, Oaklands School speech choir, Mary Robertson, Gordon Halkett, Ruth Chudley, Susan Donald and Sheila Rearden and Blake Carter in a scene from The Importance of Being Ernest.

Marks Rankin Bushby awarded for choral competition were amongst the highest he has given. The Amity Singers topped everybody with a 90 and 93, and the Wyvern Singers netted two 90's.

The Arion Male Choir in an uncontested class, also got a 90 for their first selection and an 88 for their second.

An enjoyable class for campfire singing had four entries — two Guide Companies, a Brownie Pack and Willows Elementary School.

Willows got a 90, the 29th Guide Company an 88 and the 34th Brownie Pack, an 86.

There were a number of church choirs in several classes which came in for a good deal of praise.

St. Mary's Ladies Choir and St. John's Church Choir had no contestants but St. Mary's Church girls topped a class of five entries with 175 total marks. Second was Garden City United junior choir with 170.

Two piano concerto classes during the afternoon — for under 19 and open — were described by Sidney Harrison as "a very remarkable thing."

"In a city this size — well it's not small but it's not London, New York or Paris — to have an open class in which all five of the Bethoven Concertos are played and so very well, is a sort of miracle."

The open class was won by Frances Crampton and the under 19 class by Mary Chard.

A dollar still goes a long way.
A dollar may buy a lot less these days—but it doesn't buy less Volkswagen.
To begin with, we still protect the bottom of every VW with a solid slab of steel.
Then we stamp the famous beetle shape out of a heavier gauge metal than even most big cars use.
And since we've been stamping out basically the same shape for the past 20 years now, everything fits.
(So well in fact, that the Volkswagen is actually airtight.)
Our paint job is the envy of the industry. 28 pounds worth. 4 coats. And the parts you don't see are finished as well as the parts you do.
The VW's 1600 cc. engine is not only ridiculously easy on gas and oil, it's easy on itself.
(We nearly went broke giving away gold watches to Volkswagen owners who drove their Volkswagens more than 60,000 miles.)
What's more, 1 out of every 8 VW employees is an inspector. They inspect every part of every Volkswagen 3 times. And then they give the finished bug a going over that cars costing twice as much don't get.
And when a VW finally does make it out of the clutches of our finicky inspectors, it falls right into the clutches of our equally finicky service people. And the awesome VW Diagnosis System: every new car we put on the road now gets a series of free electronic checkups.
How much do you have to pay for this amazing automobile? Only $1999.*
And right away a VW will start saving you money. Money you can spend on some of life's little luxuries: like food, clothing and shelter.
All because a bug won't cost you more for upkeep than you can keep up with.
Which is only right.
After all, if you're buying a small car to fight inflation, we think you should buy one that won't fight back.

Asleep in the Deep

PUBLIC CONCERN OVER THE reported mercury pollution of upper Howe Sound to a degree which has persuaded federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis to ban fishing there, is increased by confusing statements made by provincial Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan.

A few hours before the federal minister imposed the ban, Mr. Kiernan has stated publicly that there appeared to be no mercury-pollution problem in British Columbia. His later comment on his own statement — "This just indicates how quickly the situation develops in relation to pesticides and other contaminants" — is not convincing. It loses conviction through the statement of a B.C. Pollution Control Board spokesman that the company believed to be discharging mercury into Howe Sound was told some time ago that the Pollution Control Branch wants the company's permit amended and that mercury output will be one of the questions discussed.

There is an obvious communication gap between Mr. Kiernan and the Pollution Control Board, and the impact of this has now become apparent. At the last legislative session the government rejected proposals for a special minister to administer pollution control and made it a joint obligation of all cabinet members. The responsibility was stretched to the point where no one appears to have any particular jurisdiction.

There is the wider issue of jurisdiction divided between provincial and federal ministers. Ottawa, represented by Mr. Davis, acted swiftly to avoid the possibility of serious and perhaps fatal effects on citizens who might have eaten fish in the questionable area. That action illustrates the difference Mr. Kiernan emphasized between "a pollution problem that has been identified factually and the suspicion of a problem." The most positive identification, of course, would arise after the death of someone from eating fish contaminated by mercury discharged into the fishing waters by a specific plant. That kind of factual identification comes a little late.

Mr. Kiernan says a week or two will be sufficient for the required testing and for dealing with the source of this particular mercury pollution. That should not inflict much hardship on sports fishermen excluded from the area. But the point is that British Columbia has been caught napping. The province can ill afford to wait until some other authority draws the hazard to its notice by dramatic action — and it can afford no complacent assumption that problems afflicting other pollution-ridden areas can't happen here. We need active and continuing pollution inspection and control.

One Man, One Vote

PART OF THE PUBLIC DISILlusionment with the two traditional political parties in Quebec stems from their reluctance to change an electoral system that makes a mockery of the one-man, one-vote principle. One obscure section of the British North America Act still freezes large parts of the Quebec electoral map despite huge population shifts since 1867.

Eligible voters range in numbers all the way from 6,600 in the Magdalen Islands riding to about 75,000 in one constituency north of Montreal. According to the Toronto Globe and Mail there are about 3.5 million eligible Quebec voters, which ideally would work out to an average of 32,400 per riding. The Montreal region, traditionally Liberal in sympathy, has nearly half the provincial population but seats only 32 members out of 108. English-speaking urban voters are heavily under-represented while French-speaking rural voters are vastly over-represented. Canada and British Columbia moved in recent years to remedy similar numerical inconsistencies.

The Lesage Liberal government recommmended a redistribution system that would have ensured that the number of voters in each Quebec riding would not exceed or fall short of the provincial average by more than 25 per cent. No action was taken. On April 29 it will be possible for the Union Nationale to win re-election with as little as 30 per cent of the popular vote. On the other hand, the separatists theoretically could win 15 to 20 per cent of the popular vote and not elect one member. Such discrepancies in a democratic system can encourage a "parliament of the streets" with all its excesses. Canadians will hope that dislocations in representation will not hamstring the Quebec election at a crucial time in Canadian history.

South African Boomerang

SOUTH AFRICA'S PRIME MINIster Vorster apparently accomplished the purpose for which he called his early election this week. He knocked out the dissident extreme rightist element that broke away from his National Party and raised a challenge to his leadership. But the election has boomeranged to a degree that obviously disconcerts him. He lost seats to the more moderate United Party opposition, a possibility suggested before the ballots were cast.

Newspaper polls had indicated that many voters were more liberal in their attitude to several vital questions in the country than was the administration, and at election meetings voices were raised disputing the apartheid policies Vorster himself represents. While the prime minister was attacking the ultra-right, its emergence at this time could have represented to many citizens little more than government-supported apartheid in its extreme form.

At this distance, the result appears to reflect a stirring of support for liberalization, and at least a partial withdrawal from the official South African position which has attracted such widespread criticism throughout the world.

People Swallow Anything

THROUGH ACCEPTANCE OF gastronomically hideous contortions of science, a patient public has swallowed a lot.

There was the carrot routine — to improve night sight. That turned out to be a propaganda dodge to divert enemy eyes from radar in its experimental stage. Then came the soya bean boom — wonderful nutrition in most palatable form — and it tasted just like it looked, dull and solid. For a while blackstrap molasses — the cure for all ills and the sure recipe for longevity — held centre stage, or centre table.

To make what went before seem delicious, science then forecast the future use of plankton as a food staple — as yet without serious acceptance. And now, Reuters reports, the British Columbia Research Council has come up with a concoction which promises an abundance of protein for the hungry — biomass, which is a derivative of natural gas.

There is a multitude of uses for natural gas of different types, from cooking to political oratory, but as food? How do you top that?

"Sick Humor"

While I admit it takes courage to publish the tasteless cartoons which appear on your editorial page from time to time, I hardly think that gives you the qualifications required to question the courage of future astronauts.

The cartoon published on April 20, would, I suppose, come under the category "sick humor" and this in no way qualifies it for the editorial page of a daily newspaper. — Alice James, 467 Lampson.

Listen to Galbraith

The Prime Minister's cure for inflation reminds me of the old-time physician who used to bleed patients for almost any ailment. The trouble was, however, that often the sick man died before the treatment could take effect.

With unemployment now at 6.7 per cent one wonders how long it can keep on going up without like results to the nation's economy. What Dr. Trudeau must realize is, that like blood-letting, Keynesian economics has become out of date. He should have listened to a real specialist, Dr. John Kenneth Galbraith, when he saw him in Ottawa recently, for the latter has explained the present predicament clearly and lucidly in his latest book "The New Industrial State." IN THE YEAR 2070

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Escape From the Hell of Indolent, Well-Fed Wealth

Hutchison

IN Canada and elsewhere the year of 1970 is notable for labor disputes, strikes, riots and class warfare. But as historians will record later on, the year of 2070 was much worse. Before that dreadful year ended a general world-wide strike and total paralysis brought civilization to a sudden stop. Not, however, because the people wanted to work less, for higher wages. On the contrary, because they wanted to work more, for lower wages or, if possible, no wages at all.

By this time, of course, work had been abolished under a constitutional amendment. The machines did everything and humanity was rich and idle, with a solitary exception.

Through his secret influence with the government, and his massive campaign fund contributions, a former tycoon and multibillionaire who called himself Mr. Adam (undoubtedly an alias) was allowed to work. Within towering stone walls, barbed wire and machine-gun emplacements he dug the earth, planted cabbages, built crude chicken houses and made clumsy pieces of furniture. Callously exploiting his privileged position, he grew lean, healthy and muscular while the rest of the population grew fat, soft and miserable.

His wife, Mrs. Adam, who had once been a famous hostess, party-giver and owner of the world's largest diamonds, was equally privileged. The government allowed her to weave cloth for her own clothes and cook real food over a wood stove instead of eating the free vitamin tablets and packaged plankton distributed by the state Diet Bureau. But she was a heartless woman. The misery of the masses never disturbed her. Besides, she had no time to worry about them in her carefree work schedule of 16 blissful hours a day.

This fortunate pair was actually allowed to breathe genuine fresh air within the sealed enclosure, though everyone else wore a gas mask and carried a tank of synthetic oxygen because the earth's atmosphere had long since become fatally poisonous.

Clamor for Work

Mobs of unemployed and underprivileged citizens, all rich and desperate, surged around the sanctuary, clamoring for admission and the right to work at least 40 hours a week, preferably longer.

They were turned away and, if necessary, shot by the palace guards who explained to them that their living standard was higher, by undeniable statistics, than any ever known in the past. Moreover, the economists demonstrated that if people worked they would wreck the whole economy when it depended entirely on machines operating automatically without human attention.

Strangely enough, this information did not satisfy the rebels. The angry mobs slunk back at nightfall to their affluent homes where every imaginable luxury was supplied without charge by the state and, in most cases, no children disturbed their peace. Child-bearing had been forbidded by the Bill of Rights and only one family in a thousand, chosen by public lottery, was permitted to have a baby.

That rare prerogative was much sought after and often secured through the bribery of officials who fixed the lottery if you paid them enough, but you had to pay a lot, in such things as antique silver, heirlooms, gems and precious art objects, since no one wanted or could use money. The corruption of the bureaucracy, in the issuance of birth permits, reached its climax in the notorious Bed Chamber Scandal of 2044 A.D.

Then the government set up a Royal Commission on Birth and Boredom (commonly known as the B and B Commission). In a five-volume white paper, written by a distinguished authority named Edgar Benson (now a rather old man but still vigorous and, as his critics complained, immortal) babies were defined in the taxation laws as capital gains and taxed accordingly.

Careless of these stern penalties, people continued to want children. Defying the state inspectors, the vast army of spies and the death sentence for illegal parenthood, children continued to appear mysteriously. They brought high prices on the black market, and even on the white. The state seemed powerless to control this increasing anarchy.

Government was now based on strict democratic principles known as Participation, a sacred word, and vested in one man, whom no one had ever seen and who styled himself Your Friendly Participant. Yet, with all this superb apparatus of management, civilization was reeling toward chaos and collapse or, as an obscure patriarch named Trudeau said, toward the ultimate disaster of a Just Society.

Sanctuary Stormed

So it turned out in the ghastly year of 2070. The mobs stormed the sanctuary, killed the guards, caught Mr. Adam among his cabbages, his wife at her spinning wheel, sentenced them to a lifetime of cruel indolence, despite their pitiable cries for mercy, and finally broke into the private office of the Friendly Participant himself.

Alas, he could not be found. In fact, he had never existed. But deep down in a concrete silo the searchers stumbled on a huge computer which had been governing the world electronically for half a century or more.

With appropriate and solemn ritual, before millions of cheering spectators, the computer was broken into fragments and buried. All the other machines were destroyed. Everyone went to work again and lived happily ever afterwards, on what the economists joyfully described as the lowest and best standard ever achieved by mankind.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

A Peace Package for the Whole of Indo-China

Frye

IT is no longer wholly accurate, if indeed it ever was, to speak of war "in Vietnam." The war now visibly embraces all, or virtually all, of Indo-China: Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam. The only part of the Indo-Chinese peninsula not physically a battleground is North Vietnam. It follows, therefore, that peace efforts directed solely to South Vietnam are no longer wholly relevant to the war they are designed to end. The peace conference should also be expanded to embrace Indo-China as a whole.

This is, of course, another way of saying that a new Geneva Conference, or some reasonable facsimile, should be convened. The war has reached a point where it would be easier to solve the problems of all participants simultaneously than of each separately.

This has long been the view of the British and French governments, and of many people in Washington. For a short time this month (April 16-18), it also seemed to be the view of the Kremlin. Then Moscow retreated to the position that a Geneva conference on the 1954 or 1962 pattern would be "unrealistic at this time."

Tomorrow's Possibility

What is unrealistic today, however, can become realistic tomorrow. There is a slight element of flexibility in this latest Soviet stance, and the United States has been seeking to explore the possibilities.

The logic of events is impelling. What the Communists say they want for Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia is, in each place, the same: neutralism and coalition.

Frustration and war-weariness being what they are in the United States, many Americans now would be prepared to buy such a settlement — even if they feared it might lead thereafter to Communist rule.

There is, therefore, a basis for negotiation. The ostensible objective of the Reds coincides with the minimum settlement acceptable to many Americans.

But it would be extremely difficult to negotiate such a peace for Vietnam alone. The fanatic resistance of the Saigon regime is only one of the major obstacles. For peace to be conceivable on this basis, it would have to be part of a package which blurred the humiliation and defeat it would represent for President Thieu.

It would also have to contain provisions which would make a subsequent Communist takeover in Saigon difficult. The minister of the interior in a new government, for example, the man in charge of the police, would have to be a non-Communist.

There are not many counter-concessions which the allies could make, in Vietnam alone, which could persuade the Communists to agree. The counter-concessions would have to be made outside of Vietnam.

One might be the restoration of neutralism, in place of the present pro-western regime, in Phnom Penh, Cambodia. (That regime must, however, survive to be useful as bargaining currency.) Another might be revival of the three-sided Laotian coalition set up by the Geneva Conference of 1962.

Only a conference empowered to deal with all three parts of Indo-China could come up with such a settlement. Soviet UN delegate Yakov Malik was unquestionably correct when he said April 16 that only such a conference could "bring about a relaxation of tension" in the area. It is sad, and puzzling, that he subsequently was instructed to modify that view.

President Nixon, for his part, has contributed a new element of flexibility to the American posture. "A fair political solution," he said in his April 20 telecast, "should reflect the existing relationship of political forces within South Vietnam.

"We recognize the complexity of shaping machinery that would fairly apportion political power in South Vietnam. We are flexible. We have offered nothing on a take-it-or-leave-it basis."

This is being interpreted, with official encouragement, as a reference to possible geographical partition, the Communists being left in control of physical areas they hold. It could also, with less violence to the language, be taken as a hint that a coalition regime for Saigon is now negotiable.

No Arrogant Demand

A few sentences later, Nixon added: ". . . We will not agree to the arrogant demand that the elected leaders of the Government of Vietnam be overthrown before real negotiations begin." Could they be overthrown after real negotiations begin, that is, as a result of an agreed coalition? The President did not say.

There was, for the first time, no reference in Nixon's text to free elections as the means of apportioning political power and of effecting self-determination. The means to be used were left open. All that was ruled out was an imposed coalition prior to peace negotiations.

The President's words can be clothed with much meaning, or with little, as circumstances direct. But the bait has been dangled. It is almost as if he were responding to Malik's implied offer of a Geneva Conference, at the right time, with a promise that at such a conference, subjects of interest to the Reds might be discussed.

Once before, during the Cuba-missile crisis, the United States chose to embrace a Soviet offer which had been withdrawn. President Kennedy treated a proposal by Nikita Khrushchev as if it were still valid — and Khrushchev acted upon it. It became the basis of settlement.

Whatever the reason why Malik pulled back from Geneva "at this time," the United States has wisely sought to keep the idea alive. It could prove to be a far more satisfactory escape hatch than Vietnamization, which may be merely a euphemism for abandonment of the struggle.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

A pleasant day's outing is available to those who drive to Cowichan Lake and view the changes of scenery along the way.

After you leave Duncan the road turns and twists with the Cowichan Valley on one side and on the other, the high mountain range.

This large expanse of valley floor is now covered with a natural forest growth composed of Douglas fir, hemlock, maple and red alders.

It seems such a short time ago that this area was a desolation of burnt stumps and bald, standing snags. Even now some of the old snags that are almost covered stand out like sentinels, warning us of fires that can and do destroy more timber than we harvest.

The vegetation is different in many ways from that of the Victoria area for there are very few flowers in bloom at present, no Easter lilies or sea blush to give color. But there is an abundance of huckleberry and elders growing along the banks as well as horsetails.

Pass through the village and go down to the lake shore where the Kiwanis have their camp close to the water. Here there are many surprises. This land was logged off many years ago and now it is covered with a new forest of fir, hemlock, a heavy growth of alder and some maples. This is a true natural re-establishment of an inland, water-side forest. It is different from the new man-planted reforestation regions where Douglas fir has been favored for its commercial value and, I think, leaves the new forest open to many forms of disease or insect infestation.

If you wander around the clearing you will find an abundance of bleeding heart, a few trilliums and many showings of Siberian miner's lettuce. There are also a few clumps of devil's club that are just beginning to break into leaf at the top of their snake-like stems. Beware of the sharp spines on this shrub.

Growing here and there are stands of the blackcap or wild raspberry, perhaps the most delicious of all the wild fruit. There is lots of groundsel growing in the loose gravelly soil. Do you know that this plant makes good pickings for budgies and canaries?

For some reason there is no salal or Oregon grape.

Close by the lake the alders are thick and have a great deal of lichens growing on them, no doubt due to the moisture that comes in off the water from the northwest winds. Here the sword fern is in abundance, indicating that it is first class land for a conifer forest.

When Audience Begins to Yawn Exploiters' Days Are Numbered

"Grin and Bare It" . . . Ho Hum on Broadway

By NORMAN COUSINS
Saturday Review

Two years ago, when the Swedish motion picture I Am Curious (Yellow) opened in New York, word quickly got out that the film showed a totally unclothed couple making love.

The result was that long lines of moviegoers waited — sometimes for hours in punishing weather — to see one or two brief erotic scenes dropped into a murky, muddled, morose, meandering story about a slow-thinking young woman who was engaged as a public opinion poll-taker.

No matter that the advertised action was incidental to the general theme; people seemed willing to endure any amount of the extraneous and the incomprehensible in order to gaze, however fleetingly, at anatomical structures possessed by at least three billion human beings on this planet.

●

The response to the film has to be considered in context. "Curious" was only one of a fast-growing number of efforts — in movies, plays, books, magazines, and art — to meet what was thought to be an insatiable public craving for vicarious sexual adventure.

Attempts were made to intellectualize and upgrade the exercise by terming it a manifestation of new freedom in human affairs, and a refreshing antidote to hypocrisy and prudery. It was obvious that hypocritical attitudes about sex abounded in our society.

●

But some advocates of the new approaches were not without their own hypocrisies and deceits. Many of the same motion-picture producers who inveighed against taboos and restrictions on candid sex films competed with one another to have their pictures branded "X," so that they could exploit the fact that their films were so daring that not everyone would be permitted to see them.

(The rating system itself is full of astounding irony and wrapped values. No attempt is made to rate films according to their violence. It is apparently considered far less harmful to a child to see human bodies lacerated, tortured, dismembered, or shot than to see them unclad.)

The real issue emerging from the extreme new candor is not whether society has been too rigid — it probably has — but whether many specimens of the new candor are anything more than a colossal invasion of privacy.

As such, they are not a manifestation of freedom but an assault on it. For nothing is more essential to freedom than privacy.

It is inevitable that the tide should now be turning — less as a reassertion of an old "morality" than as a reflection of man's basic need for dignity and privacy.

Human dignity is not solely a political concept. It has as much to do with personal privacy as with codified rights.

●

People are not fit subjects for exploitation — whether in terms of their labor, their minds, or their bodies. They are not anomalies of medicine or scaffoldings for the display of private parts.

The fact that people will rise to defend their personal integrity is a basic element in the present situation.

Neither should we underestimate the corrective power of boredom. One of the non-hits of the new Broadway season was Grin and Bare It, which closed after a short run.

In terms of skin display, it made Hair or Oh! Calcutta! look like Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm. The entire cast performed in the nude.

What was most interesting and significant about the play, however, was not what happened on stage, but what happened in the audience. The house kept getting emptier night after night. The play was a thorough bore.

●

There is nothing like a slow box office to start a new trend. And the producers are getting the message.

The message is not that sex has ceased to be intesting, but that there are dimensions to it far more meaningful and appealing than the producers have so far displayed.

The ultimate problem in their approach to sex is not that the films and plays are too mature, but that they aren't mature enough. Adolescent exhibitionism and voyeurism must not be confused with mature entertainment. At least burlesque was honestly labelled; there were no pretense at opening up new frontiers of freedom.

Far worse than any invasion of privacy by producers would be an attempt by government to decree moral norms.

The state should not attempt to arrogate to itself a role that depends on far wiser definitions than it is equipped to make.

The cash register is a powerful checkpoint, and nothing registers more powerfully than when the public is bored stiff. In the end, this is the only workable alternative to censorship.

None of the foregoing is intended to suggest that a massive counter-reaction to extremes of so-called candor is in full force.

What is happening, if we read the signs correctly, is that considerations of privacy and good taste are proving to be not as trivial as the exploiters tend to think.

U.S. Indochina Myth 'Grand Scale Madness'

By J. W. FULBRIGHT

(From a recent speech to the U.S. Senate)

It simply does not matter very much for the U.S., in cold, unadorned strategic terms, who rules the states of Indochina. Nor does it matter all that terribly to the inhabitants.

At the risk of being accused of every sin from racism to Communism, I stress the irrelevance of ideology to poor and backward populations.

Someday, perhaps, it will matter, in what one hopes will be a constructive and utilitarian way.

Schools, Seeds

But in the meantime, what earthly difference does it make to nomadic tribes or uneducated subsistence farmers, in Vietnam or Laos or the north of Thailand, whether they have a military dictator, a royal prince, or a socialist commissar in some distant capital that they have never seen and may never even have heard of?

At their current stage of undevelopment these populations have more basic requirements. They need governments which will provide medical services and education, fertilizer, high-yield seeds and instruction in how to use them.

They need governments which are honest enough to refrain from robbing and exploiting them, purposeful enough to want to modernize their societies, and efficient enough to have some ideas about how to do it.

Whether such governments are capitalist or socialist can be of little interest to the people involved, or to anyone except their present rulers, whose perquisites are at stake, and their great power mentors, fretting in their distant capitals about ideology and "spheres of interest."

KY

I am apprehensive of our ability to stay out of war in Laos and Cambodia as long as we remain at war in Vietnam.

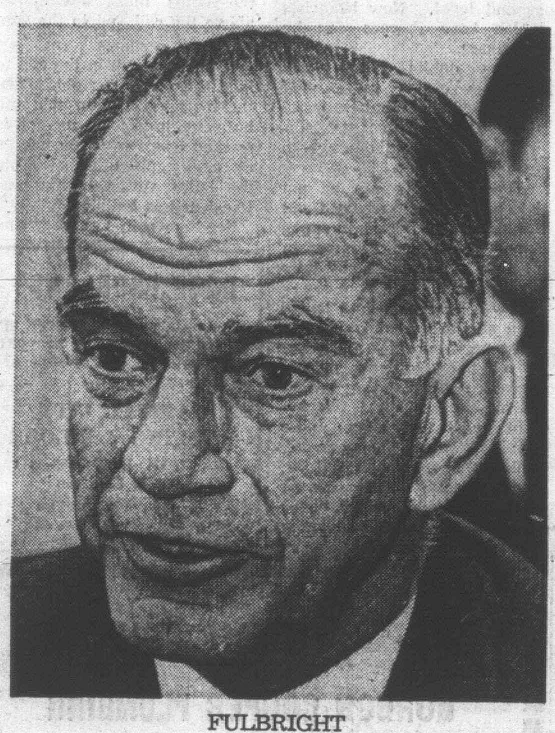
The issues in the three countries are inseparable. I do not see how we can get out of any of them except by means of political settlement applying to all of them.

As they have shown by their advance in Laos, and as further developments in Cambodia may also demonstrate, the Communists are not going to confine the fight to a battlefield of our choosing and, as Secretary Rogers readily admitted, the initiative is theirs.

'Low Posture'

I do not know what more is needed to demonstrate the incongruity of the policy of Vietnamization.

The administration is trying to strike a "low posture" in the rest of Southeast Asia while preserving an American base in Vietnam, and the Communists are not allowing them to do it.



FULBRIGHT

They cannot drive us out of Indochina, but they can force upon us the choice of either plunging in altogether or getting out altogether.

It is this choice that the Nixon Administration has thus far refused to make. "Myth" is a mild word for madness on so grand a scale.

Not only has the rationale for Vietnam proved unfounded; it has shown itself to be disastrously mistaken. Instead of deterring Communist intervention in Southeast Asia, American military involvement has turned out to be a powerful magnet for it.

We have one great liability and one great asset for negotiating a political settlement. The liability is our peculiar devotion to the Saigon dictators.

Remove Veto

Since they survive at our sufferance, the handicap could be removed by the simple expedient of putting Mr. Thieu and Mr. Ky on notice that they can either join us in negotiating a compromise peace or make some arrangement of their own.

Of all the options open to the Thieu government, the only one we can and should remove is their present veto on American policy.

I have always been puzzled by our gratuitous tenderheartedness toward rightwing dictators who need us far more than we need them. It is one thing to tolerate such regimes, because it is not our business to be overthrowing foreign governments anyway.

But in the case of such unsavory military dictatorships as those in Greece and South Vietnam, we have been much more than tolerant; we have aided and supported these regimes against their own internal enemies.

Kangaroo Court

I do not think this is done out of softheartedness— although our Embassy in Saigon has seemed extravagantly solicitous of Mr. Thieu, even to the extent that Ambassador Bunker has stanchly refused to intercede on behalf of Tran Ngoc Chau, the South Vietnamese deputy who was sentenced by a kangaroo court to 10 years at hard labor for maintaining contacts with his brother, a North Vietnamese agent — despite the fact that Chau reported these contacts to the CIA and the U.S. Embassy.

It takes more than Realpolitik to explain such gratuitous friendliness toward rightwing dictators. I suspect that the explanation lies in that attitude of crusading anti-communism which has colored so much of American policy over the years.

The charm of the rightwing dictators has been their staunch anti-communism, and that appears to have been enough to compensate for despotism and corruption. . . .

Newsman, Heal Thyself

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

When a national association meets in convention, it usually goes out of its way to make sure that it gets its story across in the newspapers.

This is quite in order, for most such gatherings are in varying degrees occasions for legitimate public interest.

If a national body attempts to keep its sessions off the record, it is likely to be besieged by gate-crashing reporters determined to find out what the secrecy is all about.

★

There were two national gatherings of some importance in Toronto last week. Ope, the annual meeting of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association, the other the meeting of The Canadian Press, the news-gathering co-operative owned by Canada's newspapers which also supplies news for radio and television.

All meetings took place behind closed doors. And strange as it may seem, few reporters were assigned to find out what was going on.

★

The CDNPA does not deal with much that relates to editorial content of newspapers. Its business is business.

But the economics and the technology of publishing are of great concern to many Canadians who have nothing to do with publishing themselves.

What these men have to say to each other (as differing from what private discussions they may have in their own boardrooms) should be recorded, if for no other purpose than to satisfy the curiosity of those who regard all publishers as sinister custodians of the Establishment image.

The Canadian Press, which does deal with editorial matters, at least moved to open its door part-way. Its members voted to subdivide the annual meeting into business and general sessions. The working press will be allowed to cover the latter category — but not until next year.

★

That's a lot better than total secrecy. Yet the business sessions are likely to be more relevant to the public. After all, the CP budget determines to a large extent the quality of the news service Canadians get.

If enough reporters were assigned to listen at CP's keyholes, a movement to open the doors all the way might succeed and even CDNPA might bow to the inevitable.

The Demon and the Dauntless Three

By ART STOTT

Stott

Because they are compassionate, a group of Victoria intellectuals allows me to join its company periodically. Its members overlook my various gaucheries, bring me into their conversations and do a workman-like job of making me feel socially acceptable. I recognize their kindness, and also the difference between us. These people have an erudition I cannot match. They also have habits I admire. Unfortunately their demonstration of character and mind makes more glaring the silliest of my vices. I am the only one in the gathering who smokes. Quite apart from the time when I mistook a cloisonne objet d'art for an ashtray, my bad habit makes me feel loutish.

This, coupled with the giraffe throat I develop at night to disturb my slumber, leads me to believe that I should start kicking the weed again.

Like a distinguished observer of social ways a century ago, I have no difficulty in stopping smoking. Like him I've done it hundreds of times. In the light of current prolonged publicity against nicotine and tars, however, it occurs to me that my periods of abstinence should be somewhat more extended than heretofore. And for that reason I am observing the withdrawal symptoms of three of my office colleagues who gave up the vice last weekend. It is not a reassuring study.

* * *

One of them, who knew boyhood hunger in occupied Holland and from it developed the most cheerful cynicism I have encountered, had a blithe approach to the war on cigarettes when it was building toward a crescendo last year. He saw one of the horror pictures on what smoking could do to the human being and from it drew a conclusion of macabre humor: "Show me," he said, "a fine, healthy, pink lung, and I'll show you the lung from a person who is deceased. How else could it be extracted and kept in a bottle?"

Because two of his office friends had decided to fight their addiction, he decided to join them in the challenge to nicotine. If they'd quit smoking, so would he, and the three put up $25 apiece — the last to return to the weed to collect the total.

* * *

After five days of no cigarettes, my friend's whole personality has changed. He giggles now, and babbles. His mind, unfogged, has become so active he skips from subject to subject like a grasshopper. His taste buds have regained their sensitivity and he can no longer stand the constant diet of coffee on which, with cigarettes, he used to subsist. Instead of a coffee break, he steps out for a milkshake until he achieves his daily bloat. Beyond that, he finds it difficult to concentrate on his work, cannot endure the leisurely process of sedentary thought and has to be active, like a string of lighted firecrackers.

Another of the trio, a young man of ideas and serious cerebration, is plunged into gloom by the events of the day that stare at him from newspaper columns. Humanity is becoming more inhuman to humanity. Violence is rampant. The quest for truth, the upholding of ideas, the process of calm reason all assume a sort of depressing futility. Also, he now finds it difficult to hit the right typewriter keys and he has chest pains although his physician tells him, after searching examination, that he is in robust good health.

The condition of the third of this gallant coterie, a quiet young man not given to complaint or self-pity, is quite as serious, if not more so. He suffered a minor physical collapse, but is coming along nicely now, thank you.

I view all this as merely an example of early withdrawal pangs, well known to medicine. Once over them, the young men concerned will attain a restored balance, a feeling of well-being, a clarity of vision, a low heart beat, and generally vigorous health. If they stick it out, that is.

A person in my position, seriously considering the possibility of going back to the inhalation of pure air, is foolish to delve too deeply into the transient difficulties of those who have made the decision.

There are other men of my acquaintance who have quit for a period of three years and don't miss cigarettes now any more than they did the first day they stopped smoking. And in the office is one paragon who tells me after seven years he never thinks about returning to the habit. Wisely I refrain from asking the latter what substitute vices he has developed to replace the one he has repudiated. When I see him at the corner of Fort and Foul Bay, I immediately assume he is doing the family shopping for meat, vegetables and canned goods at the chain store next door.

* * *

No question about it, though, I'd be wise to quit. On very few occasions in my life have I suffered from insomnia, still less from broken slumber except when the children were infants, or when the seagulls open their daily congress at 5:30 these mornings.

So I find it annoying to come now out of deep, untroubled sleep around 3 a.m. because my throat feels as rough and dusty as used sandpaper, as dry as Death Valley.

Sure it's time I quit. But I'll just watch the office trio for a while longer to make sure that the cure isn't worse than the complaint.

Dolphin Won't Go

BIMINI, The Bahamas (UPI) — Ric O'Feldman, trainer of many dolphins used in a television series, has landed in the lonely Bimini jail for attempted dolphin-napping.

An acquaintance suggested that O'Feldman may have been carried away by "Earth Day" along with a touch of anthropomorphism in trying to free a dolphin from his pen by cutting his underwater fence.

But his attempts in behalf of a bottle-nose dolphin at the Lerner marine laboratory here may have been in vain, anyway. The dolphin made no effort to leave after the fence was cut away.

"You've ruined me," Feldman was quoted as telling the porpoise as police led him away.

AIRBORNE EVIDENCE CUTS TWICE

CHICAGO (UPI) — Daniel P. Bartoli, 52, faces a charge of polluting the air.

Bartoli was arrested in his north side apartment Thursday as he threw hundreds of pieces of paper from his window.

The pieces of paper were records of horse bets, police said. Bartoli was charged with being the keeper of bets and violating the city's air pollution ordinance.

TWO CULTURES COMPLETELY OPPOSITE

Keys to Success in Raising Onions or Leeks

Tips for Home Gardeners

By JACK BEASTALL

The onion and the leek may not be considered garden plants of high standing, but most home gardeners aspire to grow them at some time or another with results that vary from outstanding success to total failure.

Although classed as cousins, the culture of one is just the opposite of the other, a fact not so widely known as it should be.

Most gardeners in England can produce a good crop of onions despite the vagaries of their summer weather, but when it comes to leeks there are no gardeners to match the skill of those in northern England and southern Scotland.

●

This is the area in which horticultural shows are devoted entirely to displays of leeks, and competition is so keen the judges use a rule and a pair of calipers on every specimen. Quite often a few thousandths of an inch means the difference between first prize or no prize.

A leek with the white portion about 12 inches long and a diameter of at least two inches is about the smallest any judge would consider in the running for a prize.

Ancient records indicate the leek was cultivated in Egypt at the time of the Pharoahs. While it may have originated in this warm climate, its fame in Scotland and the colder parts of Wales and northern England indicates its extreme hardiness. The severest winters fail to harm the plants; they can be left in the ground to be dug as needed and the gardener has none of the storage troubles associated with onions.

While both leeks and onions will produce some kind of a crop in any soil, for good results they both prefer a rich, dry medium loam, not wet bottom land. In the home garden a suitable soil can be made by adding quantities of humus in the form of well rotted manure or compost.

The seed of leeks can be sown in succession from February to the end of April, the early sowings indoors or in a cold frame, and the later ones outdoor in prepared seed beds as soon as the weather appears settled.

For one sowing only the middle of March is about right, but if you missed this you can still make an outdoor or a cold frame sowing before the end of the month. Even this late sowing will give you a succession if you transplant the largest seedlings first and the rest as they increase in size.

●

The main secret in procuring good leeks is the manner in which they are planted, and the method used in Scotland and in most market gardens in worth following.

After the soil has been well worked and levelled a dibber is used to make three-quarter-inch holes about eight or ten inches deep, and the seedling leeks are dropped into these holes completely out of sight.

When the holes are completed and the seedlings dropped in, a light watering will wash sufficient soil down around the roots, and the job is finished.

The holes can be six to nine inches apart unless you are out for record size, in which case 12 to 18 inches will be necessary.

●

Setting the seedlings deep into the soil does away with the need for blanching the stems before lifting, for it is the white part of the leek, not the green leaves, that is eaten.

As mentioned at the beginning of this article, the culture of onions is just the opposite. To grow good onions and ripen them successfully, the bulbs must always be above the soil and in the sun.

Onion seedings are set just deep enough in the soil to hold the plants upright. When the roots have taken hold and bulbs begin to form the soil is worked away from the plants at each cultivation, leaving the bulbs sitting on the soil like a tennis ball.

Seed sown in February and planted out in March should give plants that will ripen naturally in July. When this stage is reached the bulbs must never have more water than is in the soil. Even a rainstorm can spoil the crop.

What happens when natural ripening starts is this: the outer layers of scales begin hardening, the neck shrinks and the leaves lose color and begin to wilt.

If water reaches the roots at this stage, growth commences again at the centre of the bulb, and either ruptures the hardened scales, or when the scales are too hard, forces its way into the neck of the bulb producing what is called "bull-necks".

●

A bulb with ruptured scales (indicated by bulges) or with a bull-neck is not for storage, and is useless for showing in a fall show.

Gardeners in areas of unfavorable onion climate have resorted to many schemes for obtaining some measure of success despite adversities.

●

One method often seen in books is to bend over the foliage and break some of the roots. Just bending the foliage is not sufficient, the idea is to break the fibres in order to lessen the food supply from the leaves and thus induce ripening, but this will not make good onions unless the bulbs have reached full size for the variety being grown.

Roots are broken by pushing each bulb to one side, repeating every four or five days from a different angle until all roots are broken and the bulbs free.

Obviously, the area to be used for onions must be carefully planned so that when ripening time comes they are not next to a crop that needs copious watering, such as beans or peas.

Regarding fertilizer, both onions and leeks take a bulb or potato fertilizer the same as used for the daffodils in spring. This will be a 4-10-10 mix. Both crops also respond to side dressings of coal or wood soot (not oil soot) and to dressings of wood ash.

WORK FOR WEEK

As wallflowers fade, pull up the plants for composting. They are biennial in nature, but try keeping a small bushy plant or two by cutting off all flower stems, to see if they will go through next winter and flower well next spring.

Cultivate lightly, bare soil compacted by wind and rain. This allows entrance of air and more rain.

Old branches of forsythia and the early Spiraea thunbergii which have finished blooming should be cut at ground level. New branches which bore flowers can be shortened.

Plant dahlia tubers and gladiolus corms in a well composted soil. Remember to place dahlia stakes at planting time to avoid damage to tubers later.

Tomato plants can be put into five-inch pots of good soil for standing outdoors in warm sunny place, and bringing in at night until plants are fully acclimatized.

Sow a few bush lima beans in a sheltered, sunny border. They need an early start, but if set back by cool nights, make a further sowing in mid May.

In nearly all soils, make small sowings of carrots, leeks, onions, spinach, lettuce, peas. Leave beets, sweet corn, bush and runner beans until soil is known to be warm enough.

LONG HAIR GOES WITH SHORT JOBS

DETROIT (UPI) — The cost of a haircut in metropolitan Detroit may shoot up to $3.50 because of layoffs in the automobile industry.

"When people are out of work, one of the first things they cut down on are haircuts," Frank Salomone, secretary-treasurer of the Wayne County barbers local 552, said Thursday.

Salomone, is seeking permission from the local membership to reopen contract talks with barbershop owners and ask for the 50-cent hike. He said he's been talking to barbers "all over the area and there's no doubt that they are losing business."

"I think it's primarily due to the automobile layoffs, though the new long hair styles have had some effect too," he said.

Forces' Rent Hikes Limited

OTTAWA (CP) — Increased rents for permanent married quarters for forces personnel will nowhere exceed one-quarter of the income of any family, Defence Minister Leo Cadieux assured the Commons Friday.

Mr. Cadieux said the recently announced rent increases were recommended some time ago by the treasury board and delayed by his department for more than a year. They were being introduced only after considerable study, he said, and were based on a weighted national average of civilian rents.

Angus MacLean (PC—Malpeque), who questioned Mr. Cadieux on the increase, said they mean an extra $4,500,000 in rent for the Canadian forces.

He urged Mr. Cadieux to consult Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford on measures to ensure that civilian landlords do not take the opportunity to extract excessive rents from mili-

Here's where a little thinking can save you a backache... weeks from now.

There are two basic ways to fertilize a lawn. The standard heavy-weight, short-term method, or the long-term Lawn Green method.
Lawn Green contains a balanced formula with special UF nitrogen that releases slowly into your grass. That way it keeps on feeding your lawn for weeks after initial application. You get a greener, better nourished lawn. And you get to spend more sunny afternoons with a caddy cart than your fertilizer spreader.
Another thing to remember is that 22 lbs. of concentrated Lawn Green equals 40-80 lbs. of conventional fertilizer. And one 22 lb. bag of Lawn Green covers a full 5000 square feet. So Lawn Green makes light work of things.
It's your summer. Enjoy it.

LAWN AND PLANT CARE

Weed-Free Shrubs, Ornamentals, Flower and Rock Gardens
One of the surest ways to prevent a weed from growing is to lick it before it starts. At the seed stage. This can be accomplished by using Granular Weed Preventer, containing Trifluralin.
Trifluralin prevents seeds from germinating. As a result, desirable plants can not be started from seed in Trifluralin-treated soil. But neither can weeds. The trick is to time things so only the weeds are eliminated.
For Established Perennials, Shrubs and Ornamentals
Since these are not starting from seed, no problem. Just clean out existing weeds in the spring and treat with Granular Weed Preventer containing Trifluralin.
For Flower Beds
After transplanting annuals, wait 2 weeks until they become well established. Hoe to remove any weeds, then treat with Granular Weed Preventer containing Trifluralin.
Fruit Trees
Apples, cherries, peaches, pears and plums can be very successfully grown by the home owner. But the first secret of success is regular spraying.
The second secret is, keep things simple. There's no need for you to worry about a dozen different sprays. Green Cross Fruit Tree Spray is a balanced formula that will control most common insect pests and diseases.

Quebec NDP Chief Eyes Party's Organization

By DON MacPHERSON

MONTREAL (CP) — Roland Morin, 40-year-old leader of the Quebec New Democratic Party, expects to have "a lousy golf season" this year following the April 29 Quebec general election.

A former member of the Quebec staff of the United Automobile Workers of America, he says he will be too busy continuing the organization work started in the current election campaign to get in much time on the links.

Elected interim leader by the party council March 22—10 days after Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand called a spring election—Mr. Morin acknowledges the party's problems in organizing for its first Quebec campaign.

Premier Bertrand's timing caught the party without a leader or campaign organization.

"It cut short our time to organize the campaign, to choose candidates and to build our organization," he said.

The party is running only 14 candidates, all but two in Montreal-area ridings, and Mr. Morin sees the campaign as an opportunity for the NDP to "offer our policies" and begin building its organization.

CLAIMS BEST TEAM

"I believe we're running the best team of candidates, even though it's the smallest—or perhaps because of that."

Mr. Morin himself is running in Montreal Marguerite-Bourgeoys, held by Claire Kirkland-Casgrain, former Liberal minister of transport and communications.

A short, stocky man with a dark moustache and sideburns, he has gone through his long campaign days with a slightly rumpled appearance and the air of a man always on the move.

He first became involved in politics while a student at a classical college in the 1940s, where he worked for the nationalist Bloc Populaire.

AIMS TO CREATE JOBS

From 1953 to 1956 he was a Montreal civil servant. He later worked as a translator for the federal government, and as editor of Canadian Transport, the official publication of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

Mr. Morin joined the NDP Aug. 20, 1963, the day after he began to work in the labor movement. A few weeks later he was appointed to the Quebec party's provisional council.

Mr. Morin was an unsuccessful NDP candidate in Montreal Maisonneuve in the 1965 and 1968 federal general elections.

Although the NDP has failed to elect a member in Quebec in the four federal general elections since the party's founding in 1961, Mr. Morin thinks Quebecers now are ready to accept the party.

"There are at least four ridings in which a second-place finish is not out of the question, and if you can get into second place, you never know . . ."

He says he has noticed increasing interest in the NDP and its platform and adds that Quebecers seem to have lost their fear of socialism.

"Young people are alienated from capitalism and are prepared to accept either socialism or anarchy. But I have a lot of confidence in young people and I expect them to accept socialism instead of anarchy."

The party's platform calls for the elimination of unemployment and poverty in Quebec through "massive" creation of jobs, accelerated economic development, a guaranteed minimum annual income, planning of manpower needs and systematic job re-training for the unemployed.

It advocates planned economic development through direct government intervention in the economy.

Nobody Wants Bonaventure

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has failed in attempts to find a foreign buyer for the aircraft carrier Bonaventure.

The ship will be turned over to Crown Assets Disposal Corp. this summer, the defence department said in a release Friday.

The decision to take Canada's only carrier out of service was announced last September. It is one of a series of moves being taken by the department to save money.

STAMP NEWS

Cook Exploration Marked

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

On April 20, the Commonwealth of Australia released six cleverly-designed pictorials celebrating the 200th anniversary of Capt. Cook's exploration of their eastern coast.

In 1768, Capt. James Cook (1728-79) sailed from England, in command of an expedition, in the 370-ton vessel Endeavour. The main purpose of that expedition was to observe the forthcoming transit of the planet Venus. After witnessing the transit of July 3, 1769, at Tahiti, Cook went on to explore New Zealand's coasts.

Sailing westward, he sighted Australia in April, 1770, and later in that month, Botany Bay was discovered, and there Cook made his first landing on Australian soil. Capt. Cook charted Australia's entire eastern coast, and in August, 1770, on a small island near Cape York, he took possession of the coast for the British crown.

Australia's Cook Bicentenary issue consists of five 5-cent values, a 30-cent value, and an imperforate miniature sheet containing the six stamps. The 5-cent stamps were printed on the same sheet, in horizontal strips of five, since their designs fit together and form one composition.

They are succinctly entitled (from left to right): Cook, Landfall, Landing, The Team, and Possession. A few components from the 5-cent pictorials, such as the Endeavour, a kangaroo and a portrait of Cook, appear on the 30-cent denomination.

On April 13, Great Britain issued three registered envelopes. The new design of their embossed stamp is an octagon enclosing a profile of the Queen. The profile was based upon Arnold Machin's marvellous bas-relief, and the envelopes sell for 3s 8d, 3s 9d, and 4s.

Seven Cayman Island Easter pictorials featuring Noli me tangere by Titian came out March 23.

The United Nations Postal Administration on April 17 released two pictorial definitives. They are valid for use on mail posted only in the U.N.'s European headquarters, the Palais des Nations, Geneva, Switzerland. The 10-franc adhesive features the U.N.'s emblem, and shown on the 60-centime stamp is the emblem over the world.

On March 23, Botswana placed on sale a quartet showing: 3c, a diamond treatment plant; 7c, mining for copper and nickel; 10c, a nickel and copper refinery; and 35c, a diamond mine and five cut diamonds.

April 6 was the date on which Italy released two pictorials observing the 450th anniversary of the death of the Renaissance painter Raphael (b. 1483).

On March 17, the Turks and Caicos Islands placed on sale three Easter stamps. They depict line engravings by the German painter, engraver and draughtsman Albrecht Durer (1471-1528). The denominations are 5c, 7c and 50c, and they were recess engraved by Joh. Enschede en Zonen.

There is still time to view the Rock and Hobby Show being held in the Curling Rink, 1952 Quadra Street. Today the show will be open until 11 p.m., and tomorrow, the closing date, the show's hours are 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Canada's Henry Kelsey commemorative is an outstanding example of good miniature design. I think it's the finest Canadian stamp issued so far this year. However, its effectiveness is impaired by its size — it, as most Canadian issues, should have been larger.

Judge Says Integration Case Weak

WASHINGTON (WP) — The state of Georgia lost the opening round this week in its bid to have the courts require the U.S. government to enforce the same desegragation standards nationwide as it does in the south.

If ultimately successful, Georgia's suit would also have the effect of voiding a federal court decision ordering the state's board of education to enforce racial quotas in newly desegragated school districts.

While dismissing the suit Thursday, U.S. District Court Judge George Hart Jr. chastised the federal government for the weakness of its case and all but asked that Georgia officials appeal his ruling.

"I can't believe the government's case is as weak as you make it out," Hart told justice department lawyers who based their argument on the discretionary authority of the executive branch to enforce the civil rights laws where they see fit.

Matisse Works Gathered For Dazzling Paris Show

By ANATOLE SHUB

Matisse sculpting in bed at age of 80.

PARIS — France has rediscovered one of its greatest 20th-century painters in a breathtaking one-man show assembled from museums and private collections around the world from San Francisco to Leningrad.

The artist is Henri Matisse (1869-1954), a master of color and serenity. The retrospective exhibition of more than 270 of his works that opened Tuesday at the Grand Palais is already being ranked by French critics with the Picasso 1966 retrospective among the most remarkable exhibitions anywhere since World War II. Picasso himself once called Matisse and himself "the north pole and south pole" of modern art.

Russians Agreed

The Matisse exhibition is a dual triumph for former minister of culture Andre Malraux, who first conceived it, and art critic and Harvard PhD Pierre Schneider, who spent the last 18 months organizing it.

When Malraux visited the Soviet Union two years ago, he saw at Leningrad's Hermitage and Moscow's Pushkin Museum 24 Matisses which had not been shown outside Russia since 1910. (During the Stalin era, they were not exhibited in Russia either.) Soviet authorities ultimately agreed to send 20 of the canvases to Paris. (Four were considered too fragile to travel.)

Once Soviet permission had been granted, Schneider, who had worked 10 years with Matisse's family, was able to persuade museum directors elsewhere to co-operate. Jean Matisse, the painter's eldest son and himself a sculptor, aided in assembling more than one fourth of his father's total work in 60 years as an active artist.

Nearly a hundred canvases and other Matisse works came from museums, galleries and private collections in the United Sttes (including the Phillips and Dumbarton Oaks collections in Washington.) Other Matisses were assembled from Mexico City, London, Brussels, Milan, Oslo, Stockholm, Prague and various Swiss and provincial French collections.

210 Paintngs

The overwhelming majority of the works being exhibited here (from now until September) have either not been seen in Paris for decades, or have never been seen here at all.

The collection includes 210 paintings, 30 sculptures, a dozen gouaches decoupes, some 15 monumental drawings, a ceramic wall, two tapestries and a stunning stained glass window that had been completely unknown.

Excitement over the exhibition was so great before Tuesday's formal opening that French weeklies ranging from the conservative Figaro Litteraire to the Communist Lettres Francaises, appear this week with special sections of eight to a dozen pages devoted to Matisse. All the commentaries stress the theme of surprise and rediscovery.

In Figaro Litteraire, critic Pierre Mazars explained that the Grand Palais exhibition "destroys completely the stereotyped image of Matisse as a painter of bouquets, odalisques and open windows." According to the critics, such paintings, housed in French museums, showed "enormous talent" but hardly more than "charm, taste, superficial pleasure" — all of which influenced many French painters before and after the war.

However, Mazars notes, Matisse's "most original" canvases left France long ago. "Returning from the United States and Russia, they make us discover a painter who, in his quest of a unique style, an original art, often went farther than Picasso and, before him, made experiments just as daring. . . ."

Spectators at the opening were most moved by two of Matisse's qualities that emerge strongly from the exhibition. One is a continuous serenity, harmony and love of life which recall Renoir (who befriended the young Matisse). The other quality was an extraordinary capacity for artistic growth, development and refinement which continued until the painter's death at the age of 84.

Master of Color

The acknowledged master of colors in this century, Matisse succeeds in combining them in infinite combinations, in unusual harmony. He often compared his painting to music, and said: "With seven notes, all the symphonies in the world were written. Why not do the same with seven colors. A single note is only a color . . . two notes is already a chord."

One of the remarkable features of the exhibition is the manner in which Matisse maintained this harmony while moving through a dozen or more artistic phases, from representational art in the style of Courbet, through impressionism, cubism, fauvism, and then along on his own unique path — until finally, in the last six years of his life, he created masterpieces with deceptive simplicity in two or three colors.

One of the most breathtaking canvases on exhibit is a large (10 by 24 feet) Virgin and Child, painted for the Chapel of the Rosary at Vence, France, in 1948-49, which is a simple black and white done in pen, ink and charcoal.

A Happy Man

Matisse's serenity, harmony and constant striving for refinement and simplification of his work reflect the fact that he was, by all accounts, a personally happy man — and made his work a solace in an artistic age often dominated by neurotics imposing their special sorrows.

In this, Matisse recalls not only Renoir, who was similarly happy, but Verdi — who in his last opera, 'Falstaff," composed in his 80s nearly a decade after his "retirement," chose to write his first comedy and achieved his undisputed masterpiece with the sparest of melodic lines and leanest of orchestration.

The drawings, tapestries, gouaches, stained-glass windows and other works of Matisse in the last three years of his life recall the Verdi of "Falstaff" in their economy of means and mastery of form.

Some critics here contrasted Matisse's continuous capacity for growth with the qualities revealed in the imposing Chagall exhibition which preceded Matisse at the Grand Palais this winter.

Refined Own Work

Many Chagall admirers at that time concluded, with some disappointment, that Chagall had discovered nearly all "his" basic themes, forms and techniques in Russia before 1921 or in emigration within a few years afterward, and had, since then, largely been varying or repeating the same motifs and preoccupations. In contrast, Matisse's achievement in old age seemed all the more startling.

Matisse's ability to refine his own work is demonstrated dramatically in what will probably be the most talked about single room in the entire exhibition.

On opposite walls, there hang two oils of the same scene of five nude figures, entitled "The Dance." The first was painted in 1909, and was a gift of Nelson Rockefeller to the Museum of Modern Art in New York. The second was painted in 1910, was bought by the merchant Sergei Stchukin for his town house in Moscow, and came to Paris 60 years later from the Leningrad Hermitage.

Between the first version and the second, flesh pink becomes a darker red, the dancers acquire muscles and move closer together, the blue and green of the background become deeper. A spectator can admire the first painting calmly. The second pulls him into the dance.

Double Award to Poet

OTTAWA (CP) — Montreal poet George Bowering has become the third writer in the 34-year history of the Governor-General's literary awards to receive the prize for two books published in the same year.

Mr. Bowering, an assistant professor of English at Sir George Williams University, follows Montreal novelist Mordecai Richler and a London, Ont., playwright, James Reaney, in picking up the double honor.

Mr. Bowering was one of six Canadian writers chosen by the awards selection committee, which reviewed nearly 300 Canadian literary works published in 1969. His books are The Gangs of Kosmos and Rocky Mountain Foot. He is a native of Penticton.

The awards will be presented by Governor-General Roland Michener here May 11. Winners will also receive cash prizes of $2,500 each from the Canada Council.

Other English-language awards went to Rebert Kroetsch, an Alberta-born author who teaches at Harpur College, Binghamton, N.Y., for his novel The Studhorse Man, and to Gwendolyn MacEwen for her book of poetry, The Shadow-Maker. Born in Toronto, Miss MacEwen began to write at the age of 12 and left school at 18 to devote her full time to it.

French-language awards went to historian Michel Brunet for Les Canadiens Apres la Conquete, and to novelist Louise Maheux-Forcier for Une Foret pour Zoe. Mr. Brunet teaches at the University of Montreal and Miss Maheux-Forcier, who studied music at the Quebec Conservatory and in Paris before turning to literature, also lives in Montreal.

Jean-Guy Pilon, supervisor of cultural programs for the CBC's French network and founder and director of the literary magazine Liberte, received the French poetry award for Comme Eau Retenue.

5,800 Listened

Success of the University of Victoria lunchtime concerts this past winter has been documented.

According to a report by Roger W. Bray of the Department of Music, the 29 concerts reached about 5,800 people, filling the MacLaurin Building auditorium to 65 per cent of capacity throughout the season.

A total of 83 performers and teachers were involved.

Theatre School Pupils Perform

Students of Bastion Theatre School will put into practice what they have learned through the fall and winter sessions during the week of April 27—May 2.

They will present a varied program at Newcombe Auditorium to which the public is invited. There will be no admission charge.

Scenes from Peer Gynt, The Importance of Being Ernest, School for Scandal and a modern comedy will be presented on alternate nights.

Curtain time each night will be at 8.

Bastion will again offer a three-week summer session this year, from July 20 to Aug. 8. Registrations are being accepted now in all age groups.

Shadbolt an Explorer

Looking at Art

. . . With Gordon Rice

Jack Shadbolt is a pioneer abstractionist of importance in Canadain art. The Print Gallery on Wharf Street is showing examples of a phase of the artist's recent work, through May 2.

Many of the pictures are similar to those shown in the artist's large retrospective exhibit now being circulated by the National Gallery of Canada. They represent a very free, experimental aspect of the artist's painting.

Acrylic paint is applied loosely to very wet, heavy paper, and in many cases the paper is folded in the centre, the two sides being squished down and pulled back to produce a reverse image effect.

●

The result of this technique is usually a landscape image somewhat like a hillside of rain-blurred flowers reflected in a crystal clear lake. Sometimes brushwork is added after the folding process, and sometimes a centre strip is pasted in giving the effect of a cut-away section of earth.

Shadbolt has been a steady and prolific worker for well over 30 years not. It would seem that his eyes have been open to all sorts of styles and influences, local and international, and that many of these influences were considered as a time when few North American artists were as open in their thinking as he.

Shadbolt has mentioned a number of artists he deeply admired and whose influence he has had to struggle with. Picasso, Cezanne, Miro, Gorky, are among these.

●

It is worth noting that Picasso himself has been greatly influenced by Lautrec, Braque, African art, Greek painting, and so on, and these influences are relatively easy to trace. Pollack, van Gogh, Munch—these are painters whose influences are less readily discernable.

Considering the question of originality versus influence in the work of painters such as these it seems apparent that neither point is crucial to the quality of their pictures. The intensity and the depth to which the original idea, or the influence, has been taken, this is far more important.

Originality has become something of a fetish lately, and it often results in the attitude that one must find a unique niche (or technique) and stay there. This unfortunately can inhibit one's desire to explore and range out over a wide field of possibilities.

●

Shadbolt fortunately has never had doubts about crossing artistic territory already explored by others, usually on his way in search of something beyond. If anything could be said in criticism of his work it might be that he has been too restless to consolididate his gains. However it would do to reserve this judgment for a good large retrospective of his work.

The clear, dreamy qualities of the pictures in this particular show may have a special appeal to many viewers, and the should not be missed.

The pottery of Wayne Ngan and Banners by Helen Duffy continue on exhibit at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria. These banners are really something like hard-edge painting rendered in fabric and represent an interesting recent development of textile possibilities. These latter works will show through May 3.

Decision for Quebec Now in Hands of the People

By BRUCE YEMEN

It isn't easy to read this book dispassionately during a Quebec provincial election campaign as important as the one currently going on..

You find yourself drawn to those passages that simplify the choice that Quebecers apparently will have to make, sooner or later, about the province's role in Canada.

FRENCH-CANADIAN NATIONALISM, edited by Ramsay Cook. Macmillan. $8.95.

Such election-oriented fascination with the starker aspects of the Quebec question is strong enough to make the reader forget, for a while, that French-Canadian nationalism still defies the easy sort of package labelling that politicians and even some academics are fond of using.

Ramsay Cook's selection of essays, some translated into English for the first time, manages to show both the continuing development and wide range of French-Canadian thought about French-Canadian nationalism during the past century.

He divides the book into two sections, the first called "Interpretations" and the second, "The Exponents."

The emphasis is on detached analysis in the first section and one of the writers is Pierre Elliott Trudeau (as a full-time intellectual in 1956.)

Cook explains that in the "exponent" section which covers 80 per cent of the book, he has tried to avoid politicians or writers who are defending a particular party or program.

Instead he wants to trace the intellectual history of French-Canadian nationalism and to show that the survival of the French-Canadian community has been a major focus of nationalist thought for more than a century.

He makes the case well in the 336-page volume which finds near the end a clear-cut passage by Michel Brunet, written in 1954 but of some impact on the eve of a Quebec election in 1970.

"The younger generation must choose," writes Brunet in describing the difference between "Canadians" and "Canadiens."

"Either to become purely Canadian, thereby accepting the fact that the minority nation that is its inheritance will gradually or brutally disappear for the greater good of the majority and for the creation of a British, monarchic nation-state a mari usque ad mare. . . .

"Or to remain Canadiens by turning inward to Quebec, the province that can support and maintain the French-Canadian nationality."

Even in 1954, Brunet was writing that the federal government's effort to defend French-Canadian culture was doomed to failure.

"French-Canadians themselves have encouraged it (Ottawa) to do so by using a form of power politics to obtain the enforcing of a bilingualism that was never in the plans of the Fathers of Confederation.

"While they may rejoice at the results obtained or praise the conciliatory spirit of the Anglo-Canadian majority, French-Canadians must not blind themselves to the fact . . . that a minority accepting such a program without the political and economic means of assuring its normal development would be committing suicide."

Brunet ends his essay with this passage:

"The time for a definite choice has arrived for Canadiens; either to opt for the fusion that was the dream of some of their ancestors as far back as 1790 or to set up a political and economic framework necessary for any nation to survive.

"It is not for historians or professors of political science but for men of action to make this decision, upon which rests the future of a nation that, like other nations whose history is more than a mere memory, would perhaps be worthy of a free and rich life."

BRUNET

The men of action may not get a final decision next Wednesday from the voters in Quebec. The result is expected to be inconclusive.

The complexities of Quebec nationalism, well documented in this book, may prevent a clear decision for many years to come.

But it is clear that the question has been handed over to the people in a way that it never has before.

To read through the book is to get the impression that, sooner or later, it was inevitably going to come to a critical point for Quebec and for Canada.

In the end, Quebec nationalsim seems bound to triumph. The question is which of the many kinds of combinations of nationalism will unite enough Quebecers behind it to carry the day.

Rene Levesque and the Parti Quebecois are making a determined effort to resolve the question on the level of political nationalism, Andre Laurendeau, writing in 1953, thought he detected a growing divergence among the many types of nationalism — political, cultural, social, economic, for example — and noted that a good part of the younger generation seemed apathetic or hostile to any kind of nationalism.

There will have to be another book one day, perhaps telling how it all came together — or flew apart.

The Smug Canadians

By GEORGE OAKE

The Americanization of Canada is by now a boring theme that seems to fascinate Canadians in the same way that saner people are fascinated yet horrified by snakes.

It is at once a boring theme because we have just about talked it out while doing nothing to correct it. Now it is too late according to at least one of the essayists in this collection.

Sociologist George Martel writes, "As a country, I believe, we have had it." By the time the reader gets to his contribution he is forced to believe him.

CLOSE THE 49th PARALLEL ETC, edited by Ian Lumsden. University of Toronto Press. Paperback $3.75, cloth $10.

Not that the other essayists are quite that pessimistic; some of them even suggest creditable alternatives. But the mood of the whole collection adds up to a terrible indictment of a smug political system that could never see past Uncle Sam's coat tails.

Of special interest to British Columbians will be economist Larratt Higgin's case of the Columbia River Treaty, which in his words will eventually, "cost Canada about $100 million to give the Columbia away."

Professor Higgins, in closely reasoned argument, says the treaty was a "disaster" that marked "an abdication by the government of Canada from its over-riding jurisdiction in external affairs. Such a view inevitably would destroy the credibility, relevance, and consequently the power of the Ottawa government.".

Chilling View

Backing up this chilling view Professor Higgins quotes from a 1965 election speech of former Prime Minister Pearson: ". . . we will be discussing this with the United States who are very anxious to work out arrangements by which some of our water resources are moved down south. This can be as important as exporting wheat or oil."

And don't we know it in 1970. Lester Pearson's jejune speech of five years ago is ironic considering the bitter insights of present hindsight. Now the politicians are forced to be more subtle. They tell us that nothing can be done about past mistakes but they will certainly safeguard the future for all Canadians.

Then we read in John Warnock's essay, All the News It Pays to Print, that the three major news-stand distributors in Canada are American-owned. Because there are so many magazines published in North America, these firms are forced to limit the number they distribute to local news-stands, giving preference to those magazines which already have high sales, including necessarily those which they distribute in the United States.

If a new Canadian magazine manages to corner a distributor, the costs involved are tremendous. The distributor takes almost all the income of the first few thousand sales, and a high percentage thereafter. Thus a new magazine, if it wants to sell on the local news-stands, must be prepared to undergo steady losses while it builds up circulation, and few can afford that.

As Professor Warnock says, "No other industrialized country permits foreign control of news-stand distribution."

Even hockey, which seems to be one of the few manifestations of Canadian life that arouses latent passions and lugubrious sentiment, has found a home on American artificial ice. Bruce Kidd writes that all but five of the 35 North American commercial hockey teams are located in the United States and all but six are owned by Americans. Mr. Kidd concludes: "It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that American capital has put Canadian hockey out of business in Canada."

If these examples make the reader think that we have iced much more than the Canadian puck, then he is correct. Without exception the essayists are pessimistic about the Canadian future in varying degrees.

Agent of Business

Reading over this collection another question arises: if this process of Americanization has been going on since the turn of the century where the hell were our intellectuals and pundits over the last 50 years? Why wasn't the electorate informed about what was going on?

Perhaps John Warnock hinted at the answers to these questions when he writes, ". . . the chief function of the daily newspaper is no longer that of reporting news. Instead it has become an agent of business selling commodities."

Despite all the despair, this is an articulate well-researched collection that should be on library shelves throughout the nation's high schools and universities. For it is the young who have developed the old-fashioned consciousness of nationalism, despite U.S. and Canadian conventional wisdom that decries nationalism in the modern world.

If enough young people read this and other recent books that articulate the problem, perhaps they will be willing to trade their television sets for a little Arctic ice. After all, with our own ice, we should at least be able to do our own hockey thing.

DOUGLAS

Disturbing View From Top Court

By PETER McNELLY

The first amendment to the United States Constitution guarantees freedom of speech, but Vice-President Spiro Agnew recently called for impeachment proceedings against Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas for exercising that right.

Behind Agnew's attack on Douglas is the Nixon administration's anger over two successive congressional rejections of Nixon's nominees for Supreme Court vacancies.

Agnew argues that if the Senate believes Clement Haynsworth and Harold Carswell to be unfit for the Supreme Court, it should also investigate Douglas' qualifications.

Since Supreme Court justices can be impeached only for "high crimes and misdemeanors," it is unlikely the Senate will respond to Agnew's suggestion.

The only "crime" Douglas has committed is to write a book, Points of Rebellion, which at one point suggests violent revolution may be the only remaining channel to right the wrongs which now deteriorate political and social life in the U.S.

POINTS OF REBELLION by William O. Douglas. Random House. Paperback $2.25, cloth $5.95.

Points of Rebellion has tindered Agnew's recent outburst against Douglas, but the Justice's tenure on the court has been marked by other controversial events.

In July 1967, Douglas, then 67, married for the fourth time. His three previous marriages ended in divorce, and his fourth to a young college student outraged some members of Congress.

In 1969 Douglas came under fire again because of his $12,000 a year post as president of a student fellowship foundation which had $2,000,000 stock holdings in a firm which owned three Las Vegas gambling casinos.

Agnew and other conservative Americans will be outraged by Douglas's terse, clear indictment of U.S. mores and institutions. For Points of Rebellion articulates and documents a subversive truth: life in the United States today has become institutionally anti-democratic.

Many activists and radicals in the U.S. have been saying the same thing for years, but this book is especially remarkable because of the stature of its author.

◆

Douglas catalogues systematic invasions of personal life through wiretapping, privileged access to private data by the FBI and CIA and the technological manipulation of society through personality tests.

He argues that federal agencies commonly serve large financial interests at the expense of ecological and private citizen interests.

The key to Points of Rebellion is not its detailed argument and supportive facts but Douglas' concept of freedom under the law. He sees the U.S. Constitution as a legal guarantee of "a society where all the idiosyncrasies of man can be honored and respected."

Douglas' book presents convincing arguments that U.S. institutions now behave toward the American people much in the same manner that George III treated the Colonies.

Douglas feels that if the States continues to be run by bureaucrats who ultimately serve military and industrial interests, it will not be long before open rebellion racks the streets.

This view of American life and institutions comes from a man who has been interpreting the Constitution for 31 years as a member of the country's highest court.

Points of Rebellion is easy but disturbing reading because it transmits a pessimistic sense of how far removed the States now is from the dreams which geared its beginnings.

On Trail of Arctic Mystery Hardship Never Daunted Him

By TORCHY ANDERSON

The Arctic holds many mysteries but none is more intriguing than the icy whodunit that defied solution for just short of a century.

Capt. Charles Francis Hall, high school dropout, blacksmith, engraver, stationer, journalist, author and Arctic explorer died in the cabin of his ship on the northern coast of Greenland in November 1871 after drinking a cup of coffee. After the coffee Hall was violently ill and before he died he vowed he had been poisoned.

LIFE WITH THE ESQUIMAUX by Francis Hall. M. G. Hurtig. $8.95.

They draped the U.S. flag over his bier and the crew paraded solemnly to a shallow grave in the permafrost. The verdict of the U.S. navy was "death from natural causes."

Doubts he left among his friends were dormant for years. Stefansson in 1938 concluded that Hall had been murdered by poison and declared that it would be possible to prove it by digging up the body so well preserved in the permafrost.

In 1967 Farley Mowat, whose splendid book The Polar Passion gives a gripping account of Hall's death and old pictures of the burial, began to agitate for a solution to the mystery. A year later Dr. Chauncey C. Loomis of Dartmouth College exhumed Hall's body and the laboratory found arsenic in the hair and finger-nails. It had been a long whodunit.

Revival of interest in Hall was brought about reprinting of the first of three books written by him, or ghost-written from his extensive journals.

Had he lived today they would say of Hall that he had a "thing" about the mysterious disappearance of Sir John Franklin and two ships' crews in a futile and tragic attempt to pierce a Northwest Passage.

Hall said he "felt called" to solve the Franklin mystery. One suspects that Hall had a "call" to solve the first mystery to hand.

In this account of his first voyage he established to his own satisfaction the authenticity of relics of one of the three Arctic explorations of Sir Martin Frobisher three hundred years before. Frobisher was looking for gold for his Queen Elizabeth the First.

Hall proved that a man willing to live with, and like, the Eskimo (pardon, Esquimaux!) and learn their language could exist in the Arctic indefinitely. In this he has firm backing from Stefansson and others. He was sure that if he could reach "King William Land" and stay there long enough he could elicit from the natives the fate of Franklin, his ships and crews.

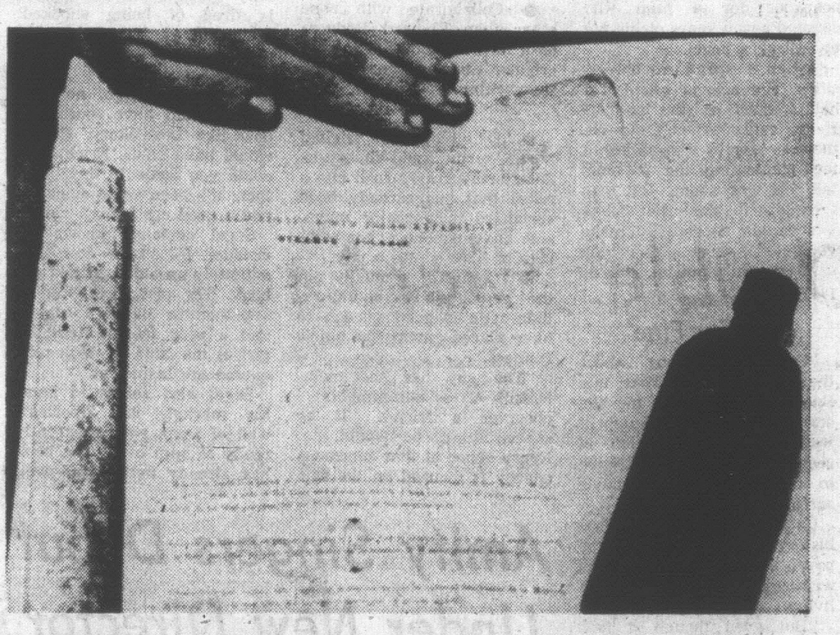
This man had a vast enthusiasm for his self-appointed task. Whether he was seasick — and he was every time he got far from land — or sick and threatened with starvation in an igloo, he never lost his enthusiasm.

When he found what he believed to be a Frobisher anvil and coal he danced and turned somersaults. A native lady standing nearby appears puzzled and amused in one of the reproductions of illustrations from the original volume printed in England. There are good color plates and many old-fashioned black-and-whites.

Hall vows he loved the Eskimos and one believes him. He understood their thinking. He recognized their mechanical ability, their generosity and, most important, he never laughed at their beliefs.

He could do his bit of ornate Victorian writing. Witness this encounter with a fair lass: ". . . Of course my welcome to such an unexpected visitor in these regions was a befitting as my astonished faculties for the moment could make it. The doorway in which she stood leads from the main cabin into my private room (on ship). Directly over this entrance was a skylight, admitting a flood of light, and thus revealed to me crinoline, heavy flounces, an attenuated toga, and immensely espansed "kiss-me-quick" bonnet . . . But on turning her face who should it be but a LADY Esquimaux."

Hall does not say whether the bonnet tempted him. Probably not; he was a very proper gentleman — and there was a husband.



DOCUMENT and bottle marked "poison" were found in 1968 100 yards from grave of Arctic explorer Francis Hall on northwest coast of Greenland across Kennedy Channel from Resolute, N.W.T.

Mind-Baring Novel Brings Discomfort

By LORRAINE PARSONS

The complexities and contradictions that make up the human animal have been a favorite subject of writers since before the days of Chaucer . . . but in few novels is a mind so nakedly exposed that a reader feels he has not the right to look in.

HUNGER TRACE by Adrienne Clarkson. McClelland and Stewart. $5.95.

Adrienne Clarkson, in her second novel, Hunger Trace, though it might have been more apty named Starvation, has succeeded in manifesting the near nude mind . . . clothed only in hate, love, fear, jealousy . . . a paradox of bondage and liberty; of destruction and creation.

Hate in all mankind thrives on love and is nurtured by jealousy. And how complicated a situation can become depends on whom and by whom these emotions are directed.

When all three are experienced by a single woman toward a married man the situation becomes tantamount to tragedy . . . and this is the subject of Mrs. Clarkson's second novel — the utter defeat of the human spirit.

The jacket blurb announces that Regina Adler is the woman we all want to be but haven't the courage. It slightly exaggerates for throughout the story she takes the form of an unconventional parasite, but emerges as a pathetic creature indeed.

While reading, (or exploring may be a better word) this novel, one cannot help but become involved and frustrated . . . for it is sensitively written in such a way that the reader believes the events are occurring now.

CLARKSON

The setting is refreshingly Canadian as it take place in Toronto, Montreal, and Ottawa, cities with which all Canadians are familiar, if by reputations alone.

The married man is none other than a member of the Senate and the woman is a worker in a candy factory owned by a homosexual, who loves a minister with whom he went to theological college.

Mrs. Clarkson has valiantly attempted to describe an urban middle-class situation and if her success has been limited at all it is only due to the fact that an individual sees too much of himself in her characters . . . and one does not like to look at himself quite so openly.

Mrs. Clarkson, who lives in Toronto with her husband and one-year-old daughter, is hostess on CBC-TV's Take Thirty and a columnist for Chatelaine.

Queen Maggie: Oscar Just Icing on Cake

By RONALD BRYDEN

LONDON—She entered quietly upstage as a previous scene ended down front. Unobstrusive in a creamy silk dress. Few people realized she was there until she launched into her first line, 'I think, Dorinda, there's no form of prayer in the liturgy against bad husbands.'

The applause on Maggie Smith's night of nights had to wait till the Old Vic curtain fell on Farquhar's The Beaux' Stratagem.

Oscar, as she had sanely said, wasn't going to help her that much. Who'd want to inherit the tea-gown of Greer Garson as Hollywood's favorite English lady-figure, even if it survived MGM's mournful auction of memorabilia?

The most her award can do is bring home that we have in our midst a diamond, a native star of India. And, as William Gaskill's production for the National Theatre superbly demonstrates, she needs a crown to sparkle in.

Gaskill has mounted Farquhar's comedy in twin livery to his brilliant 'Recruiting Officer,' the production in which she first shone on the National's Stage. Allio's designs cartoon once more with dry affection the sleepy brick and mud-hemmed provincialism of Queen Anne's midlands.

Once more, the direction strips off all 'period' fuss and flutter to let the witty, muscular dialogue make its serious points. As the program demonstrates with judicious quotations from Willard Connely's study of Farquhar, he was sufficiently earnest about the evils of encorced cohabitation to paraphrase in several speeches Milton's pamphlet on divorce. His argument for dissolving marriages by mutual consent is as pertinent as ever.

Maggie Smith takes the Stanislavski principle of playing against the character as far as it will go, and the fraction further which makes for comedy. Mrs. Sullen is a London beauty driven frantic by rural boredom, shrewish by a sodden husband. Her rage explodes in the snarling scene where pretending to be Lady Bountiful, she advises a countrywoman to treat her husband's sore leg by boning, seasoning and baking it.

In Maggie Smith's performance, she is a glacial facade of polite endurance. Her acidities slip sideways from smiling lips, sweetly as compliments. 'Between us,' she confides to her sister-in-law, gazing at her approaching husband with sorrowful, saintly patience, 'Is he not a sad brute?'

Her playing brings to mind some exquisite Douanier Rouseau giraffe peering with huge, liquid eyes nervously down her nose at the smaller creatures around, nibbling off her lines astidiously in a surprisingly tiny, nasal drawl.

Her graceful, swaying gait becomes awkward only in haste or fluster, one limb suddenly sliding out of kilter, revealing the panic hidden in so much loftiness.

The tenderness, too. She makes something lovely of Sullen's one moment of confession, 'Oh, Dorinda! I own myself a woman, full of my sex, a gentle, generous soul, easy and yielding to soft desires.' The mocking poise falls into perspective: the play-acting of a woman desperately defending herself with humor against tragedy.

But the joy of it is the way it interplays with the other performances — weaving with fascinated evasion round Robert Stephen's cheerful brutality as Archer, matching honeyed sarcasm against the sweeteness of Sheila Reid's Dorinda, offsetting with its complex irony the blunt antipathy of David Byall's Sullen.

It's the performance of a star in the true sense: not a solitary luminary but the bright centre of a galaxy, revolving harmoniously among its planets.

Great tragic performances can stand alone, unsupported. Great comic ones require a world to move in and react against, an ensemble to which they be belong.

We have in her one of the theatre's queens of comedy. To value her as she deserves, we must keep her in her setting.

'We Are Pacifists . . . Or We Are Savages'

By KARL E. MEYER

PABLO CASALS
. . . speaks out at 93

NEW YORK — As his wife Martita explains it, Pablo Casals never speaks from notes. "He always tells me that no matter what you cook up, it doesn't pay," she says. "Sincerity and truth is what counts. It gets him into lots of trouble, but he says 'I'm still here and I'm 93, so it can't be that bad.' "

Recently, the maestro was extemporizing on the war in Vietnam, a subject he has so far discussed with reluctance. His remarks may not please everybody. He was puffing on a battered pipe and curled on a hotel couch, and his words went like this:

Miracle of Senses

"Before I leave New York, I will see U Thant at the United Nations. I'm not sure what I'll say to him, but I would very much like to talk about small children. When a child is eight or nine, he discovers the miracle of his senses — that he can see, taste, hear and smell. He learns the law of variety, that no two things are alike.

"At that age a child should be taught to ask, 'Being such a marvel, how can I kill? It's wrong and it's savage.' Wars arise only from material thoughts and people fight because they are ordered to fight.

"We are pacifists or we are savages."

Did that mean that Casals felt that young Americans, who were protesting the war on Moratorium Day, should refuse to fight? The maestro did not cop-out: "I would advise people in every country not to fight."

This assertion — his most unequivocal on the Vitnam war — represents a shift in the master cellist's public attitude. Through revered as a voice of conscience, Casals has heretofore deplored the conflict only in general terms. His silence has troubled some admirers.

Recently, his concern has quickened. When he was in Mexico last month, the conductor of the National Symphony suggested that he offer to conduct his peace oratorio, "El Pressebre" (The Manager), in South and North Vietnam. Casals has eagerly adopted the idea, but he insists, "It has to be both North and South."

Strenuous Series

As it is, he is undertaking a strenuous series of concerts this year — 51 are scheduled — and will travel to Israel and Austria after conducting at the Casals Festival in Puerto Rico in May. Despite a kidney-stone operation two months ago, his vitality seems undiminished. He looks more like an animated leprachaun than a nonagenarian.

The other day he was on the podium at Carnegie Hall, rehearsing a hundred cellists in his own composition, "L Sardana," a melodic evocation of his Catalon childhood.

"Don't be lazy," the maestro exhorted. "Give character to the music. Don't play the notes, play the music." His baton danced in the air, and the cellists responded with alacrity to a musician who once performed before Queen Victoria.

Casals is famous for his pithy advice to master classes, and his remarks have been preserved by Martita, a pupil herself, who married the maestro 13 years ago.

Attics Ransacked

Recently, the Casals have been absorbed in collecting the memorabilia that will be displayed at an exhibition that opened this month at the Julliard School. Attics in Puerto Rico, France and Spain were ransacked for mementoes, including the maestro's first instrument, a string gourd he played as a boy of six

Casals is particularly proud of a holography fragment of the original manuscript of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. "You see how he originally began it," said the maestro, pointing to a reproduction. "Ta-dum-ta-dum instead of tee dee dum. An inspired change."

The Beethoven manuscript was a gift from a collector, as was another, of Brahm's quartet in B flat, which Casals acquired through an accident. He tells the story with relish.

"The Brahms manuscript was hiden away in Vienna during the war. In 1946, I saw it in Switzerland, when the owner — he's now a young man of 104 — put it before me. Without even thinking, I said, "Oh, my quartet," because it had been a work that I loved when I was young.

"So the owner turned to me and said, 'your quartet,' He insisted that I keep it."

While talking, Casals turned from time to time to Martita for help in understanding questions put in English. "I speak English, but I don't understand it," he said. "You know, there are so many accents among Americans."

By the time Casals had finished the interview, there was a lengthening queue of visitors outside his suite in the Carlyle Hotel. The maestro seemed unfazed. At 93, he is assuredly still here, and his way of life cannot be all that bad.

Joe Heller Gets a Peek At Catch 22

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD — Novelist Joseph Heller was in town for a look at his baby, Catch 22. That's the wild, wonderful Second World War novel which has become a modern classic—3,500,000 copies sold. Heller remained absent while Mike Nichols filmed the $14,700,000 movie version which will have its premiere in June.

Nor was Heller included in the script writing, which was the work of Buck Henry (The Graduate). This would seem to indicate remarkable forebearance for a man who devoted seven years of his life to writing a novel.

"When I speak at universities, I'm always asked if I had worked on the script," Heller said. "When I say no, there is always a shuffling of feet, indicating the students felt this was wrong. But then I explain to them that novelists do not necessarily make good script writers, especially of their own material. Nor do playwrights.

'It Was Fine'

"Somewhere along about the third rewrite, Mike and Buck Henry showed me the script. I must say I thought it was fine. They had left in scenes that I felt would have to come out of the movie script."

Catch 22 has had a curious history. Heller wrote the novel at night while he was writing advertising copy for a living.

"But even though it took me seven years, I probably couldn't have written it faster if I had been a full-time author," he added. "I can only write about two hours a day."

Catch 22 was finally published in 1961, three years after his deadline with Simon and Schuster. A few small journals greeted it enthusiastically, but more of the reviews were apathetic or hostile.

"The book never made the best-seller list," Heller recalled. "The publisher had never had a book that sold over 15,000 copies and didn't make the list. Catch 22 sold 32,000 in its first year, but it started slowly; only by the end of the year was it selling a thousand copies a week.

"Even the paperback edition wasn't big at first. But then about 1965 it started taking off. The Vietnam war undoubtedly helped. And the book started to be embraced by a whole new generation of college students."

Sold It Early

Heller sold the film rights to Columbia before the novel had established itself. The price—$100,000 plus $25,000 as consultant — was not huge by standards of the time. But it was enough to make Heller realize that he no longer need write advertising copy.

Since then he has done remedial writing on the scripts of such films as Sex and the Single Girl, Casino Royale and Dingus McGee, and he penned a play, We Bombed in New Haven.

He's the Guru of 'True Love'

By PETER BENCHLEY

Erich Segal is a splendid anachronism. In an age of specialization, he is that rarest of phenomenons—a modern-day Renaissance man with a dazzling range of talents. And what is rarer still, he has an invaluable knack for turning almost everything he does into a pile of ready cash.

By day, the 32-year-old son of a Brooklyn rabbi is a popular and ebullient professor of classics at Yale University. But in the hours between lectures on Plautus and Socrates, he has in the past few years managed to:

- Write the screenplays for the Beatles' "Yellow Submarine" and a number of other movies.
- Collaborate with none other than Richard Rodgers on a musical and with French crooner Charles Aznavour on songwriting.

●

- Dictate an original movie script and—almost as an afterthought—turn it into a novel that has already been serialized in a major magazine and is selling at the brisk rate of 1,200 copies a day.
- Compete annually in the gruelling Boston Marathon. (He is good enough to have placed among the top 60 runners.)

"The guy has the metabolism of a hummingbird," observes a friend. "If he slowed down, he would die. Every ounce of that enormous energy is focused on the sole end of achieving one great, joyous sunburst of glory."

Segal has made his biggest public splash with his new novel, "Love Story," a saccharine, simple and aggressively un-dirty tale of a young couple. Though reviews for "Love Story" have been mixed, the book-buying public has gobbled it up, almost as an antidote for cynical times, and Segal suddenly finds himself the guru of the gospel of true love.

"It smashes all precedents," he says with a smile. "It's going to reverse the whole 'Portnoy's Complaint'—'I Am Curious (Yellow)' syndrome . . . Everyone is tired of being shocked. We're on the threshold of a new romanticism, a sentimental age.

"Five years ago, no publisher would have touched a book like 'Love Story.' People would have said, 'Erich, how could you come to this?' But then, it's been years since we had a good cry book."

Segal certainly knows his product, for "Love Story" is definitely an old-fashioned cry book. The plot, involving an artistocratic Harvard athlete and a poor Italian Radcliffe girl, is the stuff of which soap operas are fashioned.

Segal also seems to know his market, for America's well of tears was apparently ready to spill over. The book has already netted him well above $100,000. And before all is done with reprint rights, paperback rights and movie profits, it threatens to make a millionaire out of the 5-foot-6 scholar.

SEGAL

It is typical of Segal's booming career that "Love Story" was first a seed idea, then a movie script and then a novel, for ever since college his projects have been feeding off one another and producing big deals out of small successes.

While he was a student at Harvard, he wrote a satire of Homer's "The Iliad" called "Sing Muse," which ran off-Broadway for 39 performances. While it didn't overwhelm the public, "Sing Muse" did attract an agent who began to solicit writing jobs for Segal.

●

The agent wangled him an introduction to Richard Rodgers, who was looking for a writer for a project which, as it turned out, later fell through. But the association with Rodgers' name had time to work its magic for Segal. For one thing, it led eventually to the assignment to write "Yellow Submarine."

Segal wrote the hit movie during three summer-vacation weeks and five school-term weekends, when he would fly to London on Thursday afternoons and back to New Haven Monday nights. "My students," says Segal, "never suspected that, wow, on the weekend I was having tea and crumpets with the Beatles."

His work on "Submarine" led to the screenplay for "The Games," a movie about a marathon runner. And that, in turn, persuaded Stanley Kramer to hire him to write "RPM," a picture about campus radicalism, which—in the convoluted way of Segal's life—deeply affected his career at Yale.

"It revolutionized my teaching, man," Segal says. "Just think what a difference it could make to my presentation of the decline of Athenian imperialism."

●

Despite his admitted affinity for the money and excitement of Hollywood, he has let little else about his life be revolutionized by success. He still lives alone in a small apartment in Yale's Stiles College, he still runs 10 miles a day and he still digs teaching above all.

"It's groovy turning people on," he says. "The university is still the biggest challenge, and writing 'Yellow Submarine' with $10 million worth of movie contracts waiting on the brilliance of my typewriter never panicked me like preparing a lecture for 20 people on Virgil."

Amity Singers Debut Under New Director

Making their first public appearance in concert under their new director, Dr. George Corwin, the Amity Singers will present a program Monday night at McPherson Playhouse.

This will be Amity's fifth annual scholarship concert, with proceeds providing financial aid for students at the Victoria Conservatory of Music.

Music to be performed will range from Bach's Motet IV, Be Not Afraid, through a group of folksongs of the British Isles and early English songs, to Negro spirituals.

Featured also will be Benjamin Britten's Hymn to St. Cecilia.

The Amity Singers began as a casual "sing-along" group in Victoria College days 10 years ago.

Bud White and Ken Oliphant were the first directors and then came Rodney Webster in 1963 followed by a change of name — from Varsity Singers to the present title.

Webster directed the singers for eight years, on many stages in Victoria and in five other cities, including Vancouver where a CBC recital was taped.

He resigned last November due to pressure of responsibility as vice-principal of the Conservatory of Music.

Dr. Corwin, who has succeeded him, is a choral specialist with a varied background. A graduate of the Eastman School of Music of the University of Rochester, he has conducted almost every kind of choir and orchestra throughout the United States.

He debuted in Vancouver last fall as guest conductor of the CBC Festival Chamber Orchestra and chorus.

Since September Corwin has been associate professor of music at the University of Victoria, and is now directing the combined University Chorus and Victoria Choral Society, the University Chamber Singers and chamber orchestra.

Japanese See First Version Of 'Scarlett'

By SELIG S. HARRISON

TOKYO—"It's one step short of an American opera," says Broadway's Lehman Engel, conductor of the all-Japanese orchestra playing for the all-Japanese cast of "Scarlett," the Imperial Theatre's stunning new $1.3 million musical version of "Gone With the Wind."

"It's a bit more experimental in this direction than 'West Side Story' or 'Carousel.' So it's ironic that it should be tested in Tokyo rather than New Haven."

More than ironic, added director-choreographer Joe Layton ("George M!") and composer Harold Rome ("Fanny"). Miraculous comes closer to describing the achievement of Japanese and American collaborators and their interpreters in putting together the original production of a strictly American-style adaptation of a vintage American saga in the improbable setting of the Ginza.

The idea of doing a musical based on the late Margaret Mitchell's novel goes back to the period immediately after the Vivien Leigh-Clark Gable hit movie in 1939.

▣

David O. Selznick approached Oscar Hammerstein, Rome and others, but Broadway concluded it was too soon after the film. Since then, Selznick's option has lapsed and the Mitchell estate, stung to find movie rights sold for $50,000 minting millions, has taken a suspicious look at new offers.

When Japan's giant Toho entertainment cobine asked for the rights to do it as a play in Japanese three years ago, the surprised managers of the Mitchell estate finally concluded they had nothing to lose. They reacted similarly when this escalated promptly into Toho's plan for a musical.

The Japanese impresarios were gambling that the show would be a hit, and negotiated successfully for a control clause assuring a cut in the United States and European box office take.

The Mitchell estate calculated that a flop would still leave the field clear for a new United States effort at some later time, while a successful run, even in the theatrically remote Tokyo, might actually help them to drive a good bargain for the European and United States musical rights.

This is exactly what may now be happening. Ingrid Bergman flew in from Paris to see the show earlier last month, pronouncing it "marvelous," and her producer-husband, Lars Schmidt, is reportedly bidding for the European rights.

David A. (Sonny) Werblin, co-owner of the "Tonight" show and former owner of the New York Jets, made a four-day visit here to size up the possible cost of a United States production.

The Werblin plan would tailor the show as a spectacular for the big, new civic auditoriums springing up around the country. Broadway would come relatively late, he explains.

The Japanese have put on technically brilliant replicas of other American musicals, but these have been based on finished United States products packaged export long after their every orchestration has been perfected and their most minute production problems solved.

Beginning with a relatively modest $167,000 production of "My Fair Lady" in 1963, Toho has progressed to more ambitious versions of "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Man From la Mancha" within the past year.

"Scarlett," however, marks the first time the Japanese have ever found themselves sharing in the birth pains of a brand new financail stake of their own in the outcome, and the first time they have ever been initiated to a host of exotic U.S. theatrical practices ranging from auditions to personalized improvisation reflecting the individual actor's feel for a part.

Layton, Rome and other Americans involved in the show sing the praises of Toho for its courage in tackling such a costly experiment but still have a slightly wild look in their eyes as they reflect on the built-in problems of a Ginza-Broadway partnership.

▣

Rome's wife, Florence, has a contract with Random House for a book on the two-year adventure, to be entitled, predictably, "The Scarlett Letters."

By the time Toho began looking seriously for American talent in February, 1968, the Japanese stage version had already wound up its hit run here.

Playwright Kazuo Kikuta, who is Toho's top executive and the most powerful figure in the Japanese entertainment world, ordered the production reopened for a month so that his proposed United States collaborators could see it.

Layton and Rome were impressed, convinced that a musical based on the Kikuta play would have an integrity of its own, standing apart from the book and movie.

But this was the last time that the Americans and even most of the Japanese involved in the show — ever got to see the much-admired, much-feared Kikuta ("The original inscrutable," says one longtime American devotee of the entertainment world here). He has played his role as producer and playwright through layers of intermediaries.

Kikuta, 61, a wiry, mustachioed diabetic, made his way up from radio soap operas and is known variously in the industry as "Oki" (he devil) or "Kaminari" (thunder) for his domineering search for perfectionism in rehearsals.

Layton has made no attempt to curb the use of characteristically Japanese explosions and melodramatic emotion, and the effect, initially grating, soon becomes credible and natural.

Scarlett turns on Ashley with electrifying anger reminiscent of the Kabuki, and Ashley flings himself on the dead Melanie's bed with a blood-curdling scream that could not be heard anywhere but on the Japanese stage.

By AUDREY JOHNSON

In several ways the Victoria Music Festival that ends tonight with the highlights concert at McPherson Playhouse is at least one of the best on record, if not actually the best.

As one who has been a close observer every year for two decades, I cannot recollect one in which so many favorable aspects have been conjoined.

★ ★ ★

A competitive festival of this kind is pretty well only as good as its adjudicators. The difficulty this poses is a major one, for unless an adjudicator is paying a return visit, the committee can only hope that the expert who is coming has all the other qualities that make him an all-round success.

Profound knowledge by itself is not enough. The ideal adjudicator is a person of deep humanity, of keen intuition and a paragon of tact and diplomacy, laced with good humor.

Sounds like an impossible combination?

Well, it is 99 per cent of the time.

So what can we be but thankful for our good fortune when two of a panel of 10 adjudicators measure fully up to such a standard.

★ ★ ★

The two in question on this occasion were strings adjudicator Murray Adaskin and Mrs. Leona Paterson for speech arts. One can only fervently hope that these two will come again soon—in 1971 maybe?

Most of the rest of the panel were immensely helpful—Dr. William Revelli, for example, who turned his adjudications of bands and band instrument classes into virtual clinics.

All in all this group of adjudicators was an outstanding package.

Also, from beginning to end there was not a day that was without its special thrill. But what is even more satisfactory is that the general standard which has always been high in certain instances has noticeably risen in other areas and is good evidence of the influences at work in the city's musical life.

The outsider who comes new to the scene often sees it in better focus than those who are too close to it.

★ ★ ★

For this reason it was impressive to hear adjudicator Sidney Harrison's comment, Thursday night, after the awarding of the Rose Bowl and Medallion trophies.

"I first came to adjudicate in Canada 24 years ago," he said. "And I last came nine years ago. At first we used to find that most of the really good performance was concentrated in the East.

"Then gradually a change began to come about until today we find excellent work farther and farther west.

"I have heard wonderful piano playing in Vancouver, And I have hard marvellous, absolutely exceptional playing in Victoria. I won't say the situation has tilted all the way over but it has evened out and that's wonderful."

From an administrative point of view, too, the festival has worked smoothly and efficiently but when the awards of bursaries and prizes are made tonight and the last beautiful note is sounded, the end of 1970's festival will have already overlapped the beginning of 1971.

For, believe it or not, the syllabus for 1971 is within a hair's breadth of completion.

Work, for the entirely voluntary staff and committees, never stops.

Choir Preparing For Oratorio

Rehearsals, which have been going on since January, will soon reach a culmination as the May 4 date approaches for performance of Haydn's oratorio, The Creation.

Presenting this great work the Saanich Choir, conducted by Helmut Jazen, is following up its success with Handel's Messiah in the pre-Christmas season.

●

The 60-voice choir is joined by soloists Dwilla Beglaw, Marion Matcham, Robin Greenwood, Ron Bermingham and Walter Janzen.

Accompaniment will be by a 20-piece orchestra assembled by concert master Bernard Rain.

The performance will take place in Victoria Senior Secondary School auditorum.

IRATE SHAREHOLDERS WILL FIGHT TAKEOVER

MONTREAL (CP) — A group of irate shareholders of Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd. mustered their forces Friday to try to prevent the takeover of the company by Power Corp. of Canada Ltd.

Spearheading the attack on the proposed takeover of one of Canada's major pulp and paper producers were two Montreal lawyers and shareholders—Irwin Miller and Rosaire Piotte.

More than 200 shareholders were present, surpassing the number who attended the last annual meeting March 26 of Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd.

Investors Turn To Real Estate

NEW YORK (AP) — Soured on a stock market that has been stalled for years, and convinced that inflation will be around for a long time, individual investors, institutions and corporations are increasingly turning to real estate.

Real estate, during the last four years of inflation, has been a true hedge against the declining value of the dollar. The stock market generally has failed to live up to its reputation as a hedge.

The Dow Jones industrial average, for example, stands far below its 1965 high. Urban land prices, however, have been rising at an average rate of six per cent a year.

Many corporations have been aware of the profit possibilities for many years, among them Alcoa, Westinghouse, Reynolds Metals, and several railways which find their primary transportation duties far less rewarding.

Managers of private pension funds, beset by inflation and a poor stock market, have learned in recent years that real estate investments might offer them not only better returns but more stability as well.

The latest group to be attracted by real estate investment possibilities have been financial institutions such as life insurers and banks.

The Bank America Corporation is one of several mammoth banks to set up trusts for investing in buildings and other developments. Recently, Chase Manhattan Bank, First Pensylvania Corp. and Wells Fargo and Co. developed similar trusts.

Life insurers, who once satisfied themselves by investing in real estate mortgages guaranteeing a fixed return, now are seeking direct equity investments. Several insurers have set up holding companies, with their insurance activities as subsidiaries, in order to free themselves from regulatory restrictions.

One of the largest, CNA Financial Corp., lists these examples from the Chicago area as reasons why it believes real estate is an inflation hedge:

- A typical single family lot that sold for $40 a front foot in 1960 sells today for $150 to $250 a front foot.
- A multi-family site that 10 years ago sold for $100 to $200 a square foot sells today for as high as $1,500 a square foot.
- An industrial site that sold for 50 cents a square foot in 1960 sells today for about $2.50.

CNA claims it had nearly $700,000,000 in real estate investments at the end of 1969. This was a 10 per cent increase over 1968, and company officials forecast another 10 per cent increase for 1970.

Wall St. on Brink Of Six-Year Low

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. stock market prices stand on the brink of falling to their lowest level in six years.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials toppled this week 28.65 points to 747.29, edging closer to the year's low of 744.06 registered on Jan. 30.

Beyond that, the next lower level was 741.00 on Nov. 27, 1963.

Analysts say investors are discouraged with the stock market and are staying away from it. They say investors were concerned with a deteriorating situation in Cambodia, inflation and poor first-quarter earnings reports by companies, among other factors.

Their attitude, analysts say, is to keep out of the market until some encouraging sign appears.

The market Friday went through the 17th consecutive session in which declines outran advances. Analysts said this indicated the market was heavily oversold.

Several rally attempts failed to take hold and analysts attributed it to entrenched pessimism among investors.

Big Demand For Alberta Coking Coal

EDMONTON (CP) — Two major Alberta coal producers will double their capacity this year to supply Japanese markets for coking coal, A. R. Patrick, mines and minerals minister, said this week.

McIntyre Porcupine Mines Ltd. will boost its yearly production capacity to 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 tons in 1970 from the present 2,000,000 tons, he said.

Luscar Ltd. should double its capacity and reach 2,000,000 tons.

The immediate plans for production increases are the result of newly-negotiated 15-year contracts with Japanese coal interests that have increased Japan's original demands, he said.

Les Price, coal division manager for McIntyre Porcupine, said after returning last week from Japan that the company believes it can ship an additional 3,000,000 tons of coal annually from the Grande Cache area.

Peter Cullimore, vice-president of Cardinal River Coals Ltd., says further contracts with Japan and new contracts with Europe or eastern Canada depend on finding additional coat reserves.

GERMANS INTERESTED

Mr. Patrick said German companies are ready to buy Alberta coal on a large scale.

"But there's no question in my mind Japan will take all the coal we can deliver for the next couple of years."

Germany last year had to cut its steel production by one-ninth because of the shortage of high-grade coking coal, he said.

India now provides Germany's supply.

If Germany needs coal, France must be in about the same position, he said.

One ton of exported coal is worth about $1.50 to federal, provincial and municipal governments.

Price said hope for an eastern market is increasing in light of Kaiser Resources Ltd.'s plan to ship 200,000 tons of coal to the Steel Company of Canada Ltd.'s Hamilton plant.

Capital Gains Tax Proposals Draw Criticism

OTTAWA (CP) — McIntyre Porcupine Mines Ltd. says that if the government's capital gains tax proposals had been in effect for the last 10 years, the company would owe more than its total earnings for the period.

McIntyre President J. K. Godin gave figures to the Senate banking committee showing the effect of the capital gains tax on McIntyre's holding of 37.5 per cent of Falconbridge Nickel Mines. Under the white paper tax proposals, the increased value of this would be taxed every five years.

This tax would have amounted to $71,000,000 in the last 10 years McIntyre's total earnings over that 10 year period was $60,295,000.

A. G. Goodeve, company treasurer, said McIntyre would be forced to merge with Falconbridge and sell the Falconbridge shares or transfer them to an American company. In any case, the net effect on the Canadian treasury would be to reduce its revenues. If the Falconbridge shares were transferred to a U.S. company, the American treasury would collect witholding taxes on money paid back to Canada.

Procor Will Buy Metrocan Leasing

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Procor Ltd. have announced it has reached agreement for purchase of Metrocan Leasing Ltd. of Montreal. Price was not disclosed.

Metrocan has its head office in Montreal and sales offices in Vancouver and Edmonton. It is engaged in the leasing of equipment, machinery, automobiles, trucks, railway cars and aircraft.

Heavy Selective Buying Firms Canadian Markets

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prices on Canadian stock exchanges posted one of their sharpest periods of decline in recent months this week.

But on Friday markets held firm, mainly because of what observers said was heavy buying by large concerns.

Analysts believe that large blocks of shares in a few specific companies which heavily influence the market were purchased at prices artificially deflated in cautious, wait-and-see trading sessions.

Specifically mentioned were mining and industrial stocks.

Another reason cited for increased activity at higher prices was a reduction in long-term Canada bond interest rates, which would tend to encourage investors to focus attention on stocks.

Analysts also believe that the speculation in certain issues does not necessarily mean markets have levelled off.

The week opened on a cautious note with extremely light trading and a slight decline Monday.

Caution turned to pessimism through the week.

Light trading prevailed as investors continued to watch for signs that markets were headed upward.

With no apparent signs of strength, and disappointing profit statements from several companies, trading continued downward Tuesday.

On Wednesday, disappointment was reflected in declining stocks, bringing markets down to the lowest level in several months.

Another tumble Thursday appeared to be based on lack of confidence in the market.

Share demand weakened as investors were unable to decide whether the decline would continue or let up.

The federal government has also indicated that it will not remove price restraints which critics say are dragging down the economy.

Statistically, on index at the Toronto Stock Exchange, industrials were down 6.01 to 172.36, golds 16.90 to 152.10, base metals 6.65 to 106.56 and western oils 12.97 to 159.85.

Volume was 9,441,000 shares compared with 8,655,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 713 to 106 with 196 issues unchanged.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was off 4.72 to 168.96. Combined volume was 4,680,000 shares compared with 5,103,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 302 to 48 with 112 issues unchanged.

Dominion

Sales and ingot production were up in the first quarter of 1970 but a changed tax status produced a decline in profit at Dominion Foundaries and Steel Ltd.

Profit was $10 million or 63 cents a share, compared with $11.9 million or 75 cents a share for the corresponding period last year.

Sales hit a record $89.69 million up from $82.25 million and ingot production rose from 509,747 net tons last year to 586,921.

Mobil Oil

Agreement with Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. has been reached by Mobil Oil Canada Ltd. to undertake a joint drilling program off Nova Scotia, where Mobil has 12.1 million acres in six blocks of permits.

Mobil has done extensive geophysical work in the Nova Scotia area, and was the first company to secure rights on the Scotian Shelf.

Texas Eastern, a major U.S. energy supplier, has pipeline, propane, exploration and producing interests in the U.S. and other countries, and is based in Houston.

Sherritt Gordon

Prospects of developing a mine at its Ruttan Lake property in Manitoba are favorable, pending further ore reserves assessment, Sherritt Gordon Mines Ltd. reports.

Drilling has already established 25.5 million tons of copper-zinc ore and more information should be available later in the year.

The company had first quarter earnings of $6.7 million (59 cents a share), up substantially from $1.26 million (11 cents). They include a special depreciation writeoff on cost of facilities transferred to Manitoba Hydro.

Hudson Bay

Substantial improvement in first quarter earnings are reported by Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd., which had $7 million ($2.36 a share) compared with $5.98 million ($1.99) in 1969.

Shareholders approved a 3-1 stock split after hearing that last year was the company's best with net earnings of $29.69 million ($9.86), up $2.44 a share.

HBMS has a new copper-zinc discovery nine miles southeast of Flin Flon, which will be named Centennial Mine to mark the 100th anniversary of the province.

Imperial Oil

Imperial Oil Ltd. had first quarter earnings of $24 million, equal to 19 cents a share and unchanged from the same period a year ago.

Last year's earnings were down, from $100 million (78 cents) to $94 million (73 cents), as reported earlier.

President J. H. Armstrong predicts the company's Atkinson Point discovery well in Northwest Territories will trigger finds more important to the industry than the Imperial Leduc well was in Alberta in 1947. Three more wildcats are being rigged up.

YOUR TAXES

Constitutional Guarantees Required

By I. H. ASPER

One of the unspoken but most powerful reasons for opposition from the middle and upper income group and the business community to the government's tax reform proposals arises from a credibility issue. A good many of those who are asked to accept higher taxes on some income in exchange for lower taxes elsewhere do not trust the government.

The mistrust is not aimed at this government in particular, but at all governments, past, present and future. The present tax reform proposals are regarded with deep suspicion amongst those whose memories are long enough to enable them to consider the tax structure against the background of the tax progressions of the past 20 years.

Their alarm is supported by recent history which indicates that when one accepts a more onerous tax, there is nothing to ensure that he won't be visited by another, and then another. Since there is no finality in sight, their theory suggests that unless a stand is made at some point — any point — the progression will simply continue until private capital is wiped out in response to government's seeming endless ideas for spending.

'TEMPORARY' TAXES

In support of their pessimism, they point to the profusion of "temporary" taxes and regulations which have become permanent, as well as the introduction last year of one of the western world's stiffest estate taxes at a time when the government knew it would soon be proposing an equally stringent capital gains tax system.

The white paper itself does little to assuage fears regarding government's future direction.

All of this may be and probably is an incorrect interpretation of the government's attitude, but nonetheless, a pervasive impression has been created, and it will not be removed by soothing words. Nor was the atmosphere cleared when recently the deputy finance minister, the chief architect of tax reform in Canada, expressed the view that money transferred from the private sector to the Government was put to more beneficial use for the country as a whole than would be the case if it were left in the hands of business.

This latter assertion is really what the white paper controversy is, or should be, all about.

HAVE DOUBTS

The indications are that while upper bracket earners might willingly accept, for instance, a full capital gains tax in exchange for a top tax rate of 50 per cent, proposed in the white paper, the fact is they simply don't believe it.

They are convinced that things may begin that way, but before long, the tax rates will again climb to just under 90 per cent, and they'll still face the full capital gains tax, plus estate tax, and, as well, the tax on corporation profits, through the mandatory dividend rules, at these rather high rates. There are several other situations equally disturbing to those belonging to this school of thought.

The fact is that all governments have exhausted the willingness of taxpayers to take their assurances on faith and credit. That's why taxpayers most affected resist change: all change, even when it's for the good.

MUST BE RESOLVED

The situation can and should be corrected. Indeed, it must be resolved and the distrust removed if we are to get on with the challenges of nation-building, economic development and social and cultural improvement, and end the bickering over whether or not the tax rates should be adjusted by five or ten per cent — an unproductive and wasteful exercise.

The solution lies in tying tax reform into constitutional reform. Government should first harmonize the entire national tax system at all levels of government, and then, freeze the system into the constitution.

The constitution should allocate to each level of government those fields which are theirs exclusively and those which are to be shared, but so far as the taxpayer is concerned, the maximum levels at which he could be taxed by any government and through any form of tax, except by constitutional change, would be established.

PROPER VEHICLE

The constitution is a proper vehicle in this case. Constitutions traditionally exist to protect the life, liberty and property of citizens. As in the days of monarchal despots, the greatest threat to property is still the state itself, which annually expropriates to itself a substantial portion of what is produced by society. For many Canadians state expropriation through taxation has reached a level where they are entitled to constitutional protection.

Tying the tax system, with maximum and minimum rates of tax, but with elbow room for government in between, into the constitution wouldn't nor should it guarantee a tax freeze, because constitutions can always be changed.

But it would at least be an act by government which would help remove the apprehensions of many Canadians who wish to see an equitable system but fear we are moving toward oppression in the guise of fairness. Such a show of good faith would also remove much of the opposition to the White Paper proposals.

NIGERIA TODAY AND TOMORROW

Paving the Way for a Return to Democratic Civilian Rule

By SAM EGUAVOEN

Nigeria today has four main post-war problems or issues to face: the three R's, Reconciliation with Ibos returning to the fold, Rehabilitation and Reconstruction; the states issue, paving the way for return to the democratic, civilian administration Nigeria was used to before the coup of January 15, 1966, and the formulation of what Chief Obafemi Awolowo, the vice-president of the Federal executive council and leader of the Yorubas of the Western State, calls "national objectives."

The first I have tried to deal with in the first two articles, problems arising from the war and its prosecution and which should be expected from any civil war or any war for that matter.

The other issues are political and were favorable debate topics before anyone dreamed there would be a war.

The root cause of the Nigerian war could be traced to the issue of states. In fact it could be said that General Yakabu Gowon's creation of states in June, 1967 led immediately to the declaration of secession by Ojukwu later that month and consequently to war in July 1967.

ENAHORO
. . . federal minister

I think a little background is necessary to understand why the states issue was very topical during and before the war and why it will be a major issue in the coming few months.

Before 1900, there was nothing like the Nigeria we know today. There had been pockets of British influence along Africa's west coast, mostly in the name of the giant trading interest — the Royal Niger Company. The company administered the areas under a charter given them by the British Government. But on January 1, 1900, the Royal Niger Company's charter was revoked and the administration of the territory was formally taken over by the British government. In 1906, the colony and protectorate of Lagos became part of Southern Nigeria. At the same time, a protectorate was established over Northern Nigeria and the country's present boundaries were delineated. On January 1, 1914, the two protectorates were merged and, officially, Nigeria was born.

In the making of Nigeria, the British gave no consideration to differences between the people living in the 356,669 square mile area they had lumped together — or cared whether such people would like to live together.

For purely administrative convenience, therefore, Nigeria was made. The British, however, recognized the differences in culture, languages and religion among the 55 million Nigerians (1965 census) and hence, insisted on a loosely formed federation.

They divided Nigeria into three regions along the major tribal lines. The powerful Hausa Fulani Moslems were in the Northern region, the Yorubas in the western region and the Ibos in the east. These regions had virtual self government; little or nothing to do with the central government.

In the 1940's, however, the spate of nationalist feeling began to rise. Nigerians wanted independence and so the prominent politicians of the time started to look towards the centre; in the struggle to wrest independence for Nigeria, they had a common ground for unity.

Meanwhile, there were minority tribes (historians say there are over 200 tribes or "nations" in Nigeria), which were not satisfied with being lumped with either the Yorubas, the Hausa Fulani and the Ibos. Prominent among these were the Edo-Urohobos of the Midwest, Lagosians (although Yorubas wanted their own state), the Efiks and Ijaws in the East, the Tivs, Kanuris and Nupes in the North. Earliest advocates of states included Dr. Nnamdi Azikwe, the last president of Nigeria and a prominent Ibo leader and Chief Anthony Enahoro, present Commissioner for Information in the Federal Government and an Edo.

The issue was submerged, however, as everyone's attention was focused on the independence struggle — and politicians from the three states struggled to control the centre. Nigeria's population distribution made it impossible for one region and consequently one of the pre-coup political parties to control wholly the Federal Government.

The main political party in the North (population 28 million), Northern People's Congress (NPC) could not singly win the 1959 pre-independence general election. So they went into coalition with the Nigerian Council of Nigerian Citizens (NCNC) the main political party in the East (population 13 million) while the Action Group of the Western Yorubas (14 million population) went into opposition.

A clear insight into Nigerian politics and into whether Ibos and Hausas, the main combattants during the war, actually hated themselves, could be gained from the irony in this earlier alliance between the Ibos and Hausas.

In the federal election of 1964, there was so much rigging and allegations of corruption in the balloting that President Azikiwe, then titular head of state, called in the former Prime Minister, Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa, (Hausa), to form a broadly-based government which included all the political parties and subsequently all the tribes.

Agitation for states continued, however, after independence, but none of the regional government would want any part of its areas carved out. But somehow, the Midwest state was created in July 1963 — mainly because the federal government-controlled NPC and NCNC wanted a part of the western region chunked out.

No more states were created until General Gowon in June 1967 made Nigeria twelve states. The north was carved into six states, four of which were still Hausa Fuleni, but among Nigerians that fear of northern domination disappeared, and it would have among the Ibos but for the declaration of session by Ojukwu a few days later.

What irked him most was the creation of two states out of what he dreamt would be "Biafra" — the South Eastern State and River state both of which had the oil resources for which the east is famous.

After the 32 months the 12 states have been in operation, political observers have said the experiment has been a huge success, although the civil war kept the three eastern states from establishing firmly till late.

This is the final article of a series by Eguavoen, a Nigerian journalist who is spending the summer working at the Victoria Times.

First, as I mentioned earlier, that fear of domination of the whole country by one state is gone — for no state is big enough to even dream of it. However, one of the six military governors of the northern states said carelessly one day that the old north would rise again — a statement he regretted profusely and for which he apologized.

AZIKIWE
. . . prominent Ibo

Secondly, the government is now much nearer the people; each tribal group can now relate to the government instead of the old system where many tribes felt that aliens were ruling them.

Thirdly, the new structure has started a healthy competition between the state governments in the field of development and modernization; the weaker ones now look to the more established ones for help in economic and educational fields.

The Midwest State and Western State governments, for instance, last year sent over 600 graduates to the northern states to teach in high schools there.

And fourthly, it has actually brought Nigerians closer to one another; the differences in tribe, language and customs which were played up considerably in post-war independence politics are now being suppressed as everyone admits it is much better when the country sticks together. It is reasoned that Nigerians can develop their resources more easily as a larger family than as mini-states. There is also the international scene where Nigerians now know that one is likely to exercise more influence when rich, big and prosperous. Another unifying factor is the civil war which no one wants to think has been fought in vain.

Maybe because of the success of the states structure, some prominent Nigerians have advocated the creation of more states. Chief Obafemi Awolowo has said in over three books he has authored about Nigeria that there should be 18 states in the country.

A section of the Yorubas in the Western State have also called for their own state, a demand which culminated in the tax and farmers' riots of 1969. The Ibos of the Midwest State and those of Onitsha division of the East Central State have said they are different from other Ibos and so would want their own Niger state. Behind this move is said to be Dr. Nnamdi Azikwe who comes from Onitsha, as does Ukpabi Asika, the present administrator of the East Central State.

General Yakubu Gowon, the head of Federal military government, himself from a minority tribe in the north, said during the war that more states would certainly be created. It is not known if he would do this by decree or would leave this chore to the Constitutional Assembly which would pave the way for return to civilian government.

And this brings me to the third major issue facing Nigeria — how soon the military administrators can re-establish civilian administration.

A correspondent writing for the Colonist on February 12, 1970, remarked that the Federal government was reluctant to return power to civilian politicians, ridiculing General Gowon's assurance that: "We have given our word that we shall return to

VICTORIA'S FIVE-YEAR PLAN

POLLUTION CONTROL ($328,000)
Community septic tanks in Victoria? Draining into the Inner Harbour? Proper pumps and mains will stop this pollution.

CIVIC MAINTENANCE CENTRE ($633,000)
Would you believe that the Parks and Public Works Departments are working out of old army huts and buildings built for the horse and wagon? We will save money in repairs and increased efficiency when these are replaced.

FIRE PREVENTION AND PROTECTION ($560,000)
With three tragic fire deaths and four major fires during the first four months of this year we cannot afford to relax. The new fire hall, the training centre and the emergency fire access lane will improve our fire fighting capability.

ENVIRONMENTAL IMPROVEMENTS ($1,000,000)
Let's face it, the Inner Harbour is a mess. When the Federal and Provincial Governments add their 75% share to our $850,000, we will have $3.4 million to invest. And we will get our money back within 9 years from increased taxes in this area.
Decent housing for pensioners and low income families is still scarce. The city's 5% incentive could produce 250 more living units.

STREETS AND ROADS ($3,792,000)
Everyone knows that our streets are congested. More than 220,000 vehicles use them each day. And next year there will be at least 10,000 more! New arterials and one-way streets are a must if we are to survive.

. . . RETURN TO CIVILIAN GOVERNMENT

the barracks and return to the barracks we shall. But first, we have to sort out things."

General Gowon, since he came to power in July 1966, has built an aura of honesty around himself. His unflinching belief in a united Nigeria is no doubt responsible for the country coming out of the war not as scathed as it could have been. And, of course, his insistence on granting amnesty to all former rebels is an action which has earned him the respect of all Nigerians and statesmen all over the world.

When he says, therefore, that the army will pull out, Nigerians agree he means it. And if he can help it, he would do so today.

There are, however, a few of his lieutenants, especially some of the military governors who, not wanting to relinquish the glamorous and rewarding office of state governor, would want to continue in power.

But, as he said, there are problems to sort out; problems arising immediately after the war; the widespread corruption the First Army coup leaders of January 15, 1966, said they would rid Nigeria of, and the drawing up of a new constitution to suit the second republic.

There is no doubt that as soon as the rehabilitation problems are taken care, of, a constituent assembly of representatives from all over the country would be called to discuss the future of the country and what kind of constitution it should have. That of the first republic was suspended in 1966. Among the principal subjects to be discussed are: what kind of political system should we have? Should we retain the old multi-party system or become a one-party system? What should be the relationship between the state governments and Federal Government—should the Federation be closely knit or should the states have more power than they have now? Shall we have a military presidential commission like the troika in Ghana? What system of revenue allocation should exist among states?

This assembly might be an enlarged version of the ad-hoc committee comprising representatives of all the regions which General Gowon called in 1966 to consider the political future of the country. The work of the committee was disrupted by the civil war.

The most important decision the assembly will have to make when it meets, certainly before the year runs out, is whether Nigeria should have a one-party system or a multi-party system.

On this decision, I personally feel, will hinge the future harmony and consequent prosperity of Nigeria.

African states have tried within the past 10 years to emulate the multi-party system of government which exists in Western democracies without success. Political parties, instead of existing on philosophies and ideologies, became tribal organizations and personal affairs. The divisive nature in politics also extended to the running of governments. Development programs which would have aided the poor masses were thrown aside as each party strove to control governments, sometimes embezzling government funds for such purposes.

The failure of post-independence politics, therefore, led to coups, civil disorders and in some cases, economic stagnation.

Despite the civil war and all we have sacrificed, I do not think Nigerians have acquired that mental magnitude as to be able to practise the kind of sophisticated politics practised in the West. The bickering will resume, civil disorders will start all over with consequent effect on the economy and the development process. During the civil war there was little foreign investment in the country and only few existing industries expanded because of the uncertain atmosphere.

The one-party system seems therefore a temporary solution to our political problems, at least at the Federal level. The party, for instance, will have representatives from all the states; everyone will speak with one voice and attention would be focused on developing the country and raising the living standard of the people.

The success of such an arrangement will, however, depend on the quality of leadership we get. A few leaders who have been on the scene for a long time have indicated their willingness to return to Federal politics. Notably among these are Chief Obafemi Awolowo, popular among Southern progressives; Chief Anthony Enahoro from a minority group in the Midwestern State but well-liked by all the big tribes (he has been in Federal politics since the 1940s); and Mr. Joseph Tarka from a minority tribe in the North. The only known leader from the Hausa Fulani north is Alhaji Aminu Kano — the present Federal commissioner for communications.

With this group joining hands with other politicians in a single party, there is no doubt in my mind that Nigeria will have a smooth and harmonious administration.

It is not known yet if some military leaders will leave the army to go into politics. Gowon's case is, however, categorical: no politics.

The fourth objective for Nigeria today is the formulation of "national objectives." Chief Awolowo, who is also the Federal commissioner for finance, was addressing other state finance commissioners recently when he requested them to start thinking of economic goals for Nigeria.

The war was seen in some quarters in Nigeria as being a blessing in disguise, because it made the people realize their economic potentialities. Chief Awolowo disclosed at this conference that the war cost Nigeria about $900 million dollars without the country borrowing a nickel from any outside source.

During the war, government was forced to restrict the importation of a considerable quantity of goods. The pinch was not felt too badly though, since Nigeria was already becoming virtually self-sufficient in the manufacturing field.

There is still, however, the need to formulate a national development program. I think this is what Chief Awolowo was referring to. Such a program may have to be an expansion of the five-year development program of 1962-1968.

The cornerstone of the first plan was the development of power in the country. This resulted in the construction of Kainji dam. It cost about $240 million and was commissioned last year.

What is still not decided is whether the present military regime should formulate such a program or leave it to the next civilian administration.

Then there is the question of what contribution revenues from the oil industry can make to the economic development of the country. Oil was first discovered about a decade ago and has grown to such an extent that it is today Nigeria's biggest single industry. The country is 10th largest oil producing country in the world and third in Africa, after Libya and Algeria.

There is no doubt in anyone's mind that oil will help considerably in Nigeria's race to take off.

In concluding the series, I would like to point out what makes Nigeria what it is and what makes it tick. I can best do this by quoting an assessment of Nigerians given by Stanley Meisler, Los Angeles Times correspondent, in a story which appeared in the Colonist of April 20, 1967. The assessment is still true today. He said:

"Nigeria matters because of a vibrancy and self-confidence and aggressiveness that have made its people feel more in charge of their own affairs and destiny than any other people in Africa. Nigeria is the most African of all African countries.

"You sense this immediately in Lagos, the capital, a crowded frenetic city of color and dance, teeming and jangling. This is not the sleepy tropical town of many African countries, so quiet in the afternoon that the buzzing of flies maddens you.

"Lagos, with its population of 700,000, is a great city and like all great cities, it is intense, tough, competitive, enervating.

"Little things tell the difference between Nigeria and the rest of Africa.

"Nigeria, at least in the south, has nothing like the obsequious waiters of East Africa who scrape and bow and bend and say 'Yes, Bwana,' 'Of course, Bwana,' again and again.

"Telephone operators in Nigeria give you a piece of their mind. Airline ticket agents joke with you. Shop girls make fun of you if you fumble for change. When a white visitor shows up in Nigeria, all this give and take makes him realize quickly that the country belongs to them, not him.

"This is also driven home by the proud, striking, flowing national clothing worn so much by Nigerians. Few Nigerians ever look like awkward teen-agers in ill-fitting suits — the fate of many Africans elsewhere as they envelop themselves in western clothes. . . .

"Except in the north, government ministries are free of foreign influence. Unlike the French-speaking African countries, Nigeria does not have a host of European advisers in every ministry, setting policy and planning budget. Unlike Kenya, Nigeria does not have a white man in almost every office to see the paper work gets done. . . .

"When you talk to diplomats in the United States embassy and the British high commission, you begin to realize that far from influencing anyone, these diplomats spend most of their time either listening or wringing their hands in anguish."

EAGER YOUNGSTERS CHALLENGE VETERANS . . . . . . IN TIMES ISLAND OPEN GOLF TOURNAMENT

Brotherly Love Ignored in Family Feud on Fairways

By ERNIE FEDORUK

It was an annoying thing that happened to Keith Burrell last weekend. Big brother Robin rolled an 18-foot putt into the cup on the last green at Uplands Golf Club.

The lengthy putt enabled Robin to match Keith's score of 76 in the qualifying round of the Times Vancouver Island Open golf tournament.

Almost as if it were more important than qualifying, Keith wanted to be the Burrell family's champion-of-the-day, and to heck with brotherhood.

"Lucky" Keith, 16, snorted at his brother, three years senior.

That abandonment of brotherly love delighted another 19-year-old Uplands golfer.

"Yessir," said Ken Nott, with a wink. "I'd like to see you drawn against Keith . . . because I'd like to bet on Keith."

Chiding is part of the game. It's accepted as it comes, and even though the tone of the younger golfers is saturated with a liberal dose of sincerety.

They don't care if brother plays brother, or clubmate faces clubmate. They ask no quarter, nor do they intend to give it. In the case of the Burrells, Keith simply wants to develop into a better golfer than Robin.

That's the spirit of youth, and that is what moulds some of the more interesting situations as the Island Open qualifiers prepare for Sunday's first round of match play at Victoria Golf Club.

The battlers move off the first tee, in foursomes, starting at 9:30 a.m.

As far as the Burrells are concerned, they will meet in this tournament only if both advance to the May 24 final. The qualifying-round placing has separated them into different halves of the draw.

Keith's up top, and paired against clubmate Roger Bishop. Robin is in the bottom half. He has been tossed a tough foe for the first round — former champion Laurie Carroll. A handicap of two indicates Robin is capable enough of upsetting Carroll, even though Laurie will be marching on grounds where he formerly served as head professional.

The meaning and intent of youth is clear. The young tigers of the fairways accept defeat more easily than the barbs and bites that are thrown around in the locker room at day's end. Consequently, they find it more fun to "give" than to "receive."

"Giving" is easier when you win.

And winning is what the Burrells, Nott, Al Brown, Dave Mick, Carl Schwantje and all the other young squires have in mind in the youth-infested competition for The Daily Times Trophy.

Nott is another who has his work cut out. Also a two-handicapper, Ken tackles Cowichan professional Norm Boden, the defending champion in the championship flight of 32.

Sunday's pairings in both Open and handicap sections are printed alongside this story.

Eagerness of the youngsters suggests they won't forget to adjust their clocks for the switch to daylight time and arrive late at the starting tee.

Bill WALKER

It's got to help to know the right people in the right places. The Vancouver Garibaldi Olympic committee is not about to deny this important fact of life. Not in their most very important moment.

That's why Bunny Ahearne, the International Ice Hockey Federation president, was an invited guest this past week. That's also partly why Prince Philip was a Vancouver visitor last October.

Prince Philip is "right people." That's established. But it is extremely doubtful if he can control any sizeable bloc of votes in the International Olympic Committee. But the simple fact that he came, and liked what he saw at Whistler Mountain, won't lose any either.

It is a much more reasonable assumption, however, that Ahearne does control the opinion of more than a few otherwise uncommitted delegates. That's why his opinion was specifically sought out the past few days. He was spirited here for no other reason than to give his blessing to Garibaldi, if he thought it warranted, and also, if possible, to suggest that he would give his support to Garibaldi's bid for the '76 winter games.

Those were the basics. In that regard, the invitation could be considered a complete success. Ahearne had seen the Garibaldi brochure earlier. He knew what the winter Olympics Games needed. And now he was on the site, at Whistler Mountain. There was no need for the VGOC to lobby further. Ahearne was sold.

●

Of course, he was sold. What else could he say? Well, he did have something else to say. And he wasn't about to gloss over what he thought was a despicable job by Earl Dawson of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. He called it "ratting" and in his attempt to clear up the "half truths" which he said Canadians had been led to believe concerning the world hockey situaton, he also laid it strictly on the line for Garibaldi, and Canada.

In so many words, he put the onus on Canada to produce a hockey team for next year's world tourney and the Olympics in '72. And to announce it before May 12, date of the Olympic decision on Garibaldi.

Sure it's politics, and perhaps a heavy-handed threat, if only lightly veiled. And it should be recognized instantly for what it is.

There are lot of sacred commandments in international intrigue. And sport is no different than the other areas of mystery. You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours is just a small part of the game, but one that helps.

For example, in the Olympic voting picture, it is significant that Europe hasn't missed an Olympic games, winter or summer, since the Second World War. In two of the years they had both.

●

This year in the votes for 1976, the summer games appear to be between Los Angeles, and Moscow. The Russian capital was a late starter in the Olympic stakes. But it is a strong runner, nevertheless. Because what Russia wants, Ivan usually gets.

It may be "the spirit of '76" in America, but the Communist block appears stronger when it comes to IOC loyalties.

Russia's satelittes have been told what they are supposed to do, and it wouldn't surprise anyone, if a number of other Asian and African nations followed suit. Particularly those nations who protected South Africa's participation in the 1968 Olympics at Mexico City. Little came of their protestations until Russia also said that South Africa might be unworthy because of its apartheid policies.

Presto: South Africa was out. Those smaller nations haven't forgotten.

And besides Europe has the biggest number of Olympic votes.

True, Montreal has submitted a bid as well. But it isn't considered a threat to the others.

So, by the simple process of distributing the other goodies around the globe, this could mean that North America would be in line for the winter games. Which matches Denver against Garibaldi.

Experts say this would be a mismatch. There would be no contest. Denver doesn't belong in the same league. That's why the VGOC was smiling through the winter months.

They almost had the signature on the dotted line. Ahearne said "it was on the plate."

But is it now?

Because the over-riding fact is:

Does Canada want the Winter Olympics?

That is the matter for public acceptance, or rejection. There can be no compromise now. Or snivelling, later.

Ahearne made that crystal clear.

And he was brought here as "right people."

Pinder Is No. 1 Hawk On Boston's Hate List

By Canadian Press

BOSTON (CP) — Who's the most despised of the Chicago Black Hawks in Boston?

Bobby Hull? Tony Esposito? Stan Mikita? Nope—its rookie Gerry Pinder.

The Boston fans still respect the booming shot of Bobby Hull. They feel a little compassion for Tony Esposito, whose brother Phil is having a much better Stanley Cup playoff for the Bruins than Tony is in goal for Chicago.

Stan Mikita puzzles them—he hasn't broken out with the production of which they know he is capable.

But why hate Gerry Pinder?

Well, it was Pinder who shot the puck on a disputed goal which cost the Bruins their only home loss to the Hawks this season. The 1-0 victory last Jan. 17, is the only victory Chicago has won here since 1967.

BOUNCED OUT

Pinder's shot bounced along the goal-line and out again. The goal judge didn't flash the light—but the referee skated over and said it was a goal.

From then on, the kid from Saskatoon didn't have a prayer of winning a citizen-of-the-year award in Boston.

Gerry is one of the youngsters picked up by Chicago in the rebuilding job which took the club from last to first in the National Hockey League in one year.

He joined the Hawks after "a difference of opinion" with the management of Canada's national team.

STAYING ON ICE

Gerry hasn't been getting the solid stream of penalties which marked his career in the international games.

"I'm not playing as chippy as I was. For one thing, you're playing for a lot of somebody else's money. Also, you're cooler. You don't go on the ice knowing you're going to get one or two misdeserved penalties.

"For that reason alone—because the officiating is so much better—you aren't so frustrated up here."

The season will be over for Pinder and his mates, however, unless they can come back to win Sunday afternoon's game. They are down 3-0 in the best-of-seven tilt with Boston for the eastern division Stanley Cup title.

If they pull it out at 2 p.m. EDT on Sunday, the next game will be back in Chicago on Tuesday.

Eager Penguin Fans Are Binkley Believers

PITTSBURGH (CP) — A banner posted high in the stands at Civic Arena declared: "Only the Lord saves more than Binkley."

But the banner, and dozens more like it all around the arena, indicated more than a belief in Les Binkley's prowess as Pittsburgh Penguins' goaltender.

The banners, signs and posters showed that fans here are beginning to take a keen interest in their National Hockey League club, especially now that the Penguins are in the Stanley Cup semi-final playoffs against St. Louis Blues.

A record crowd of 12,923 fans turned out Thursday night to cheer, clap, stomp and wave their banners as the Penguins defeated St. Louis 3-2 to cut the Blues' lead in the best-of-seven series to 2-1.

The crowd was small compared with attendance at most other league cities, but it was a sell-out here where the local arena has a listed seating capacity of 12,580.

QUALITY HIGH

"We've had good fans, but we haven't had them in vast quantities," said Penguins' coach Red Kelly.

"And, boy, that has to help. It picks you up.

"It makes your hair stand on end," said the half-bald coach.

Kelly said he believes this could be a great hockey town.

"I haven't been at all disturbed about the crowds this season. If people just see three games in a row when the team is putting out they'll become fans."

The Thursday night crowd could be the turning point, he said.

"If we keep going now, this could make it.

"Season tickets make any sport. If they have season tickets they'll come in the snow and rain. This is what will happen here if they sell a few more season tickets."

And despite the Penguins' colorless defensive style of hockey, which limited the Blues to just 16 shots at Binkley Thursday night the fans have singled out their heroes.

SIGNS ABOUND

Left winger Glen Sather has a rooting section which displays a sign calling itself "Glen's Gallery." Another group of fans has become famous for calling itself "Bob Woytowich's Polish Army." And amid the posters rooting for "King Kelly" is one supporting rookie centre Michel Briere, calling him "Mike Briere—Super Rook."

Tour Rookie Sharing Lead

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Tour newcomer Bobby Greenwood shot a 68 Friday to jump into a tie with veteran Jack McGowan after the second round of the $50,000 Tallahassee open golf tournament.

Greenwood and McGowan finished the first 36 holes with six-under 138s — good for a one-stroke lead over five players bunched at 139.

McGowan, who also shared the lead after the first day, shot a 71 Friday as he kept up his quest for the $10,000 first prize.

You Just Hit It, And Hit It Again

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP)—Frank Beard had just fired an eight-under-par 64, including a string of six consecutive birdies, but refused to be jarred out of his conservative, easy-going role.

"You know me," he said, "I never have anything to say." Beard's remarkable round—he needed only 24 putts—put him into the second round lead in the $150,000 Tournament of Champions Friday.

Was he thinking about the all-time PGA record of eight consecutive birdies when he had his string going?

"No, not really. You just hit it and go find it and hit it again."

Was it his best putting round?

"I don't know. I don't keep records on that sort of thing so I really don't know."

Has he ever had six birdies in a row?

MAYBE, MAYBE NOT

"Again, I don't know. I've had five before, I'm sure. I don't know about six."

How would he characerize his round?

"I played well. You have to to shoot 64. But it was kind of ragged at times."

Ragged or not, the 134 total—10 under par on the 7,114-yard La Costa Country Club course—left him with a three shot lead going into today's third round.

British Open Champion Tony Jacklin had a 68 for 137 and Australian Bruce Crampton was in third place with a 69 for 138.

South African Gary Player, the defending champion and first round leader, never really got it going and drifted back with a 72 for 140. He was tied at that figure with Jack Nicklaus and Masters Champion Billy Casper, each with a 69.

LIKES IT WARM

Beard, the 1969 leading money winner, said it's unusual for him to play this well this early in the season.

"For one thing, bad weather bothers me," he said. "If there is one mile per hour of wind or it's one degree below 72, I don't like it."

"For another, the better you play the more you relax, and the more you relax the better you play. I guess you should be able to relax at the start of the season, but that's not easy to do until you have your goals for the year in sight."

Beard started his birdie string on the eighth with a 20 footer, then chipped in from 18 feet on the next. He holed one "from 40 or 50 feet" on the next, rifled a seven iron to within four feet on the next, had a two-putt birdie on the par five 12th and wedged to within six feet on the next.

He had three other birdies, including the difficult 18th.

ENGLAND TIED BY SCOTLAND; WALES WINS

GLASGOW (CP) — England's soccer team stood up to heavy pressure today and drew 0-0 with Scotland in the British international championship.

With Wales edging Northern Ireland 1-0 at Swansea, the tournament ended in a three-way tie. England, Scotland and Wales all finished with four points from three games.

A capacity crowd of 134,000 saw the game here at Hampden Park. It was England's last game before the team leaves for Mexico to prepare for the defence of the World Cup.

HULL SLATED TO ATTEND . . . . . . HALL OF FAME BANQUET

Bobby May Have Lots of Time

With the Chicago Black Hawks apparently unable to handle the Boston Bruins in the current Stanley Cup hockey playoffs, Bobby Hull is almost certain to head the list of guest celebrities at the second annual "banquet of champions" staged by the B.C. Sports Hall of Fame.

Organizers of the May 19 festivities at the Hotel Vancouver have received a firm commitment of attendance by the Chicago super-star, with the only proviso that Bobby would hope to have "a few days rest" after his part in the playoffs.

Since the Hawks have now lost the first three games to the Bruins in their semi-final series, the odds are excellent that Hull will have plenty of time to rest before joining other head-table celebrities.

Other main speakers at the banquet will include actor Glen Ford, who portrayed golfer Ben Hogan in the picture "Follow the Sun;" former distance swimming star Florence Chadwick; Joe Kapp, the National Football League's "player of the year," and hockey ace Andy Bathgate.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett is expected to preside over induction of the hall-of-fame's six new members, who include Victoria resident Bruce Humber and former-Victorian Art Chapman.

Tickets, costing $25 each, are being sold on a reserved-table basis. One table is being reserved for Victoria sports fans, who can obtain tickets by calling Archie McKinnon at 383-4685.

Proceeds from the function will go toward the hall's building and development fund.

Tourney Game Sunday First Test for Rocks

Victoria Shamrock coaches are appreciative of the team's nucleus of players as they prepare the Irish for their first test of the 1970 senior lacrosse season.

The campaign commences Sunday with the first game in the annual Greenwood tournament. All four Western Lacrosse Association teams are entered in the trophy event that precedes league action.

Shamrocks and New Westminster Salmonbellies open torunament activity in Burnaby Arena. Coquitlam Adanacs and Vancouver Burrards, the WLA's other entries, make their first start Tuesday in North Vancouver.

Shamrocks display their talents before home fans May 5 at the Esquimalt Sports Centre, meeting Vancouver, then complete their three-game series by playing Coquitlam at Richmond on May 9.

Completing the tournament schedule are games May 2 (New Westminster - Coquitlam) and May 8 (Vancouver-New Westminster).

ROSTER TRIMMING

Shamrocks, who have been working out in Pearkes Arena while Memorial Arena undergoes repairs to its roof, are down to 24 players. Co-coaches Ron Jay and Bert Bertoia expect all 24 will be "available" until June 8, when the legal roster must be trimmed to 18.

The coaches picked out 19 for duty Sunday but emphasized that "it doesn't necessarily mean this is our final team."

Doug Thompson and George Grover will share goaltender honors. Also scheduled to play Sunday are Ken and Frank Alexander, Ranjit and Nirmal Dillon, Dennis and Tom Somner, Smokey McLean, Mike Beaulac, Tom Churchill, Charn Dhillon, Bill Spotswood, Grant Atkins, Owen Richmond, Brian Spaven, Rod Hamilton, Don Munro and Muzz Bryant.

SPIRIT AND HUSTLE

Others continuing workouts with the Rocks are Dan Massey, Jerry Bains, Al Unwin, Ralph Delisle and Tej Dhillon.

"The nucleus is there," said Jay. "They're showing spirit, and are hustling.

"The only question is just how often they'll find the net.

"Both Bert and I are certain they'll win a lot more games than they did last year."

Coquitlam and Vancouver open the league schedule on the mainland May 12 and Shamrocks face their first test on the road against New Westminster May 14.

The Irish play Coquitlam in their first home game in Memorial Arena on May 20.

There will be 15 home games, 14 on Wednesdays at 8 p.m., and one Saturday tussle on Aug. 8.

KNICKS BLOW BIG LEAD BUT FINISH WITH RUSH

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Knickerbockers blew a 20-point lead and then reared back on the fourth quarter scoring of Walt Frazier and Cazzie Russell for a 124-112 victory over Los Angeles Lakers Friday in the first game of their best-of-seven series for the National Basketball Association title.

Willis Reed, putting on a tremendous shooting performance from the outside, had led the Knicks to a 50-30 lead in the second quarter and New York led 65-54 at the half, as the big centre out-manoeuvred hobbled Wilt Chamberlain for 25 of his 37 points in the first half.

Chamberlain, limping, and losing some of his mobility after knee surgery that kept him out of 70 regular season games, scored 17 points and took in 24 rebounds while Elgin Baylor had 20 rebounds for the Lakers.

Champs Edge Uplands Pair

Elsie Saunders and Ivy Blunt of Gorge Vale made a good start in defence of their title by capturing medal honors Friday in the qualifying round of the annual Victoria and district women's two-ball foursomes event at Uplands Golf Club.

The Uplands' pairing of Lil Thirlwell and Jean Christie tied the defending champions with a net score of 82½, but the Gorge duo took the medal on the strength of a better score on the back nine.

Jan Smith and Dot Zabel of Uplands shard third place at 83 with Peggy Matthews and Joan Scott of Gorge Vale.

Another stroke back were Phyllis Coxworth and Lorna Rooper of Uplands.

It's Only April but Expos Face Threat of Sad Season

By The Canadian Press

It's not the end of April yet, but it already threatens to become a long baseball season for Montreal Expos of the National League.

The Expos have only one win in 11 starts, and are mired at the bottom of the East Division standings, 7½ games behind the leading Chicago Cubs.

Friday, the Expos engaged in yet another exercise in futility.

Tied 2-2 in the top of the seventh inning against San Francisco Giants, the Montrealers allowed the Giants six runs, and finally stumbled to a 12-3 loss.

Elsewhere, Los Angeles Dodgers took a 1-0 decision from New York Mets in 15 innings, the Cubs whipped Houston Astros 6-3, Philadelphia Phillies squeezed past San Diego Padres 5-4, Atlanta Braves blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 9-0, and St. Louis Cardinals defeated Cincinnati Reds 3-1.

PITCHER STARTS

To add to the Expos' humiliation, the winning rally was touched off by a pitcher, as Gaylord Perry rapped a one-out double off reliever Dan McGinn. Then Bobby Bonds walked on four pitches and Ron Hunt blasted his second homer of the season.

Willie Mays followed with a walk and Ken Henderson cracked a two-out single before Dick Dietz hit his fifth homer of the season off reliever Howie Reed.

Perry wasn't the only pitcher to take matters into his own hands.

St. Louis managed just three hits against Cincinnati's rookie Wayne Simpson, but one of them was a sixth-inning single by pitcher George Culver that touched off a two-run rally and helped the Cards to their victory.

In Chicago, pitcher Ken Holtzman slashed a tie-breaking, two-run double to give the Cubs their eighth straight win.

TAPE-MEASURE BLAST

Frank Howard unloaded in the third inning of Washington Senators 5-3 victory over California Angels, smashing one of the longest home runs in the history of Robert F. Kennedy Stadium.

Howard blasted a pitch by Andy Messersmith down a runway in the upper deck in left field, estimated at more than 500 feet. It was his fourth homer of the season and snapped a 3-3 tie.

Elsewhre in the American League, Baltimore Orioles shaded Kansas City Royals 7-5. Detroit Tigers stopped Minnesota Twins 8-6 and Cleveland Indians whipped the Chicago White Sox 4-1. Milwaukee Bruins at Boston Red Sox and Oakland Athletics at the New York Yankees were rained out.

TIGERS STRETCH STRING

Besides his mammoth homer, Howard started a three-run uprising in the first inning with a two-out walk. Lee Maye of the Senators and the Angels' Roger Repoz slugged homers.

Winning pitcher Dick Bosman also drove in an insurance run with a fourth-inning single.

The surprising Tigers made it eight straight victories, sparked by Bill Freehan's 405-foot, two-run homer and Al Kaline's five consecutive hits—two doubles and three singles.

Freehan snapped a 6-6 tie by powering a pitch from Minnesota reliever Tom Hall into the left field seats in the seventh inning after Jim Northrup walked.

Dick McAuliffe also homered for the Tigers, while Harmon Killebrew connected for the Twins and Brant Alyea drove in four runs with a pair of doubles.

Rally Drivers To Enjoy Rest In Portugal

LISBON (AP) — The survivors of the European section of the World Cup auto rally began to arrive here today after covering 4,500 miles across nine countries.

Race officials said 73 of the 96 cars that started in London April 19 were still in the running.

Competitors will enjoy a six-day rest at the Portuguese seaside resorts of Estoril and Cascai before flying to South America.

Unofficial standings after completing the European section showed that Rene Trautmann of France, in a Citroen DS 21, was the leader. Second was Hannu Mikkola, Finland, in a Ford Escort. Third was Guy Verrier, France, in a Citroen DS 21, followed by Timo Maknen, Finland, in a Ford Escort, and Patrick Vanson, France, also in a Citroen DS 21.

THREE WEEKENDS ON CAMPUS

The purpose of this program is to provide residents of Greater Victoria with an opportunity to live and study at the University. Accommodation will be in University residences and instruction by members of faculty. The program consists of three separate weekends from Friday evening to Sunday noon. Each weekend will be directed towards a different topic from three areas of University study. Faculty from the Departments of Music, English and History in Art will act as Resident Tutors for group instruction and will also guide individual learning.

Central to each weekend will be the direct involvement of participants in subject matter to be studied. Live musical performances, literature readings and visits to the University's Maltwood Museum will supplement lectures and discussion. Participants will be encouraged to learn from each other as well as from Resident Tutors. An informal atmosphere will be maintained.

May 8 - 10, Music Weekend, Resident Tutor — Leslie Thimmig
May 22 - 24, Literature Weekend, Resident Tutor — Lawrence Russell
May 29 - 31, Art History Weekend, Resident Tutor — Richard Morris

For detailed program information and registration forms, call Division of Continuing Education, 477-6911, Local 395.

TV KEYNOTES

Young Regular Sara Lane Grows on Virginian

LANE . . . blossoming

By HARVEY PACK

NEW YORK — At the rate "The Virginian" is going young Sara Lane may end up playing her own grandmother.

Although Sara has been with the series for only four years of its run which makes her a newcomber compared to veterans James Drury and Doug McClure, she did start out as a frightened teen-ager and blossom into an experienced young actress right in front of the audience's eyes.

A native New Yorker and daughter of character actor Rusty Lane, she moved west some years ago with her family when dad realized all the steady work was in Hollywood and there was little chance he'd latch on to another long running play like "Mr. Roberts." At the time Sara was not particularly interested in an acting career and the lack of enthusiasm still existed when her parents began submitting her for acting jobs. From a runner-up spot in a "Miss Teen-Age" contest she landed a small role in a film and soon after that was one of many Hollywood aspirants auditioned for "The Virginian."

Asked whether she knew how to ride at the time, Sara laughed and said, "Riding I was great at. Acting was my problem." Apparently her expertise at horsemanship was a major factor in winning her the part because the producers figured they would not have to waste any precious shooting hours on her outdoor scenes.

"It was really a frightening experience that first year," she recalls.

Karen Morrow Basks For Future Shows

By CHARLES WITBECK

HOLLYWOOD — Now that all the television companies have shut down for the spring haitus, action is picking up at the beach. High-priced unemployed joggers like Walter Matthau are up in the high rent Pacific Palisades sand, while down in bohemian lower class Venice, kids like "Bold Ones" David Hartman and Karen Morrow from "The Jim Nabors Hour," loll in the sun, check the water, read New York papers and mumble "It's nothing more than we deserve."

Hantman, Morrow and others have become sun worshippers, beach rats, spring bums, drinking in California leisure, and they have few guilt feelings lounging about since their shows are renewed and they can breathe easy for once.

The beach scene is still new to Karen, a far cry from Des Moines backyards and ratty New York apartment life, so boredom hasn't set in yet.

"All you need is a car, a towel and those great sandwiches from Zookies delicatessen. Spring can be beautiful," Karen says.

She's a little cracked from sun, because her idea of a thrill is to pick up trading stamps at out-of-the-way places. Five miles out in the Valley is nothing if Karen thinks a better deal awaits her.

Miss Morrow has just put in her first full season on the Nabors Show, belting an occasional lyric, standing in the wings watching guests like Anthony Newley, playing straight woman to Frank Sutton and the star in the weekly "Brothers-in-Law" segment, grateful for any tidbit and grateful to Nabors for paying the bill, nine months of learning.

At this stage Karen appears to be a Polish Carol Burnett, ready to go either way as a comedienne or a singer. She's often mistaken for "Mayberry's" Arlene Golonka, another Pole on the way up, but Karen looks more like Carol, and she can come on strong and brassy given an opening.

"Unfortunately when I grew up in Des Moines, I wanted to be Betty Hutton," she reports. "From the age of 4 to 13 I was dancing, and I thought everybody could sing until I really began listening to my best girl friend. She began humming and it was awful." But Karen held on to that single track idea of becoming a second Betty Thunderball.

She taught school for two years and fought the New York theatre jungle through the 60's missing out on any hit, but staying in there pitching.

A Polish girl doesn't give up despite all those jokes. "We're lucky to have them. It puts us back on the map," she says. "See ya at the beach."

From My Side Of the Tube . . .

By WALTER McKINNON

Laugh-In, according to one of my most reliable uninformed sources, is on a downhill slide and gaining speed.

This morning, over lukewarm coffee and rubber eggs, he informed me he sat through Friday night's edition on Channels 2 and 6 and what was once a bright and witty format, rife with hilarious one-liners and imaginative sketches, has become mundane and "predictable ... very predictable."

If he's correct, Laugh-In is in trouble, because the one thing it cannot become and survive for long in what we "critics" delight in calling the ratings jungle is predictable.

So much for that one.

Tonight

Music Men Department

Glen Campbell (6 p.m., Channel 12) offers Dionne Warwick, western singer Roy Clark from Hee Haw, and comics Gaylord and Holiday. It's a re-re-re-rerun, but not bad if you haven't seen the episode before.

Duke Ellington comes on as a rare treat for jazz buffs (IN THE ROUND, 7:30 p.m., Channel 2) in a Vancouver production. He is interviewed, and then joins the Doug Parker Quartet for Satin Doll.

Milton Berle reviews his career with the aid of the Lennon Sisters tonight (JIMMY DURANTE PRESENTS THE LENNON SISTERS, 9:30 p.m., Channel 4) and joins with Durante in a salute to Florida. Other guests on the show include singer John Stewart and pianist Jo Ann Castle.

Good Clean Fun Department

The Honeymooners try some not-so-subtle matchmaking when Ralph's maiden aunt arrives for a long, long visit (JACKIE GLEASON, 7 p.m., Channel 8; 7:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12). Songs include Aunt Ethel, That's How You Get a Man and Married.

Dad Steve Douglas (MY THREE SONS, 8:30 p.m., Channel 7) is so wrapped up in an engaging friendship with Barbara Harper he hardly has time for son Robbie and his decision to apply for a job at Steve's engineering plant. In between interruptions it's middle-aged love in this rerun episode.

How to get rid of a disagreeable in-law (GREEN ACRES, 9 p.m., Channel 7) is the big problem facing Oliver after Lisa's maddening mother moves in and takes over, complete with her own houseboy.

Violence Department

The Cartwrights ride rough-shod through Saturday evenings now, as the CBC continues its struggle to fill this time slot (BONANZA, 9:30 p.m., Channel 2). Tonight a girl who claims she can identify a trio of murderous holdup men takes refuge at the Ponderosa, where Candy, Joe and Hoss become her willing guardians.

A villainous cabbie provides a rousing beginning tonight (MANNIX, 10 p.m., Channel 7) as our hero gets involved with a bird-brained young lady who's a murderer's target. Hoods, double-crossing each other, provide a bit of variety and add to a very puzzling plot. Gail Fisher guest-stars as the pretty target.

Sunday

Afternoon Viewing Department

It's mostly movies for the Sunday afternoon viewer . . . but there are a couple worth seeing. The Member of the Wedding (1:30 p.m., Channel 5) is warm with more than a little bit of nostalgia. If muscle-bound epics are more to your fancy, try Duel of the Titans (2:30 p.m., Channels 6 and 8), an Italian epic very loosely portraying the fabled twins Romulus and Remus.

For western fans there's Wagon Train (4:30 p.m., Channel 7) featuring gambler Euchre Jones. Jones needs all the friends he can get but he's far from happy about the appearance on the wagon train of an old protege, Link Cheney.

Sullivan, Cosby Section

Lots of singers and comedy acts make up this week's edition of Old Stoneface (8 p.m., Channels 2, 6, 7 and 12). Jane Morgan, Lesley Gore, Richie Havens and John Gary all appear in the vocal department. Stiller and Meara, Moms Mabley and Robert Klein contribute a bit of humor.

Algebra as you like it (BILL COSBY, 8:30 p.m., Channel 5) is not coach Chet Kincaird's cup of tea. Chet takes over an algebra class and almost makes a go of it . . . until he comes across a missing page—the critical one with the answers on it. His method of coping is pure Cosby at his most entertaining.

Wow! Department

In her first TV special Hollywood's current number one sex symbol, Raquel Welch (9 p.m., Channel 7) relies on handsome around-the-world settings, fast-paced camera work and a number of pop tunes, plus brief appearances by John Wayne, Bob Hope and Tom Jones. Oscar winner Wayne gives her some pointers on riding and visits a Mexican orphanage with her; Hope plays a silly cowboy to her imitation of Mae West; and Tom Jones and Raquel wail together in a London club.

HIGHLIGHT of Calgary's annual Stampede, billed as the biggest outdoor show on earth, is the chuckwagon races held nightly. Here is the start, with four outfits jockeying for position.

FRONTIER ERA RECALLED

Calgary's Big Blast

CALGARY — Each year in July this sophisticated, business-like Alberta city suddenly changes into a bustling, rip-snorting cowtown reminiscent, its residents and tourism hucksters fondly believe, of Canada's frontier era.

For ten jammed days (July 9 to 18 this year) stampede fever grips the entire city. Western-garbed natives and tourists alike go on a spree of whooping and hollering in pursuit of fun.

From dawn to late at night, Calgary literally jumps with more activity than anyone can possibly completely take part in. Main thoroughfares in the downtown area are closed off and each corner has its own distinctive brand of toe-tapping entertainment.

Thousands pack the streets to square dance to the strains of western music while others are watching honest-to-goodness Indians performing native dances.

Where cars and buses normally stream through busy streets, flapjacks and bacon are served from chuckwagon tailgates. And merchants lining these streets say "to heck" with business and join in the fun. Their shop fronts are renovated to take on the frontier look.

•

And everyone — including tourists — wears a Stetson. They're obliged to. After all, the Greatest Outdoor Show on Earth only happens once a year.

The really big action, however, takes place at the Stampede grounds — 115 acres of the wild west just five minutes by horseback from the centre of town. Nestled in a crook of the Elbow River, the grounds come alive during Stampede days with rodeo events, displays, Flare Square, chuckwagon races; fireworks, and a full-blown midway.

Evenings at the Stampede Grounds feature the world famous chuckwagon races where more than 30,000 fans nightly cheer four teams of thoroughbreds and drivers to the sound of hooves thundering around a half-mile dirt track.

At the sound of a klaxon, four outriders quickly stow cookstove and equipment aboard the old-style chuckwagons, then mount their horses to follow the rigs in a figure-eight around starting barrels. First chuckwagon over the finish line is the winner. Eight races are run each evening.

•

Every evening show is climaxed by brilliant ground and aerial fireworks displays, exploding over the grounds in a kaleidoscope of dazzling color.

One major highlight of Stampede days is the giant western parade where hundreds of thousands of spectators annually pack the two-mile parade route. Slated this year for Monday, July 13, the parade blends scores of authentically-costumed Indians, cowboys and horses with dozens of marching bands, fabulous floats, scarlet-coated Mounties and hundreds of gorgeous girls.

Cowboys, Indians, Mounties, floats, midway, rodeo, chuckwagons, street dances, casino, racing, parades, exhibitions — and tens of thousands of Calgarians and tourists having the time of their life, They'll all be there to bolster Calgary's claim that the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede is the Greatest Outdoor Show on Earth.

CASTLES IN SPAIN

Upkeep Is Biggest Cost

GRANADA (AP) — Castles in Spain can be a dream come true—but be practical about it.

That, in effect, is the government's warning. The Office of Fine Arts, in charge of many of Spain's historic treasures, says foreigners apply for information about purchase of a castle.

But Jesus Silva of the office says the tone of the inquiries indicates that people are lured by low initial prices without knowing the costs of restoration maintenance.

One of the castles has just been sold for $2,828. The buyer may need hundreds of times that figure to put the crumbled Castle of Lanjaron in usable condition.

★ ★ ★

The buyer, a Spanish firm headed by Rafael Zurita Requena, has not indicated what it plans to do with the castle built by Islamic invaders during their rule of Spain from 711 to 1492. Presumably it will become a tourist lure.

One big problem is transportation. The castle sits atop a 600-foot rock. It commands a strategic position for watching all roads into the nearby village of Lanjaron. In days of Moslem rule, it was used primarily as a fort overlooking four populated areas below.

The castle remained as the Moors left it until last century when a mayor ordered the buildings inside the fort destroyed on the grounds they were about to collapse. Now only the walls of the fort are standing.

"Nothing remains," remarked a Spanish journalist "but ruins and memories."

Aruba Tourism Growing

ARUBA, Netherlands Antilles —For the third straight month, the Dutch island of Aruba has set a new record for total visitors to the island, according to statistics released by the Aruba tourist Bureau.

Michael Kuiperi director of the Aruba Tourist Bureaus, said 8,043 persons visited the southern Caribbean resort island during March, a 40.5 per cent increase over the 5,723 recorded in March 1969.

The March total also gave Aruba its best three-month total in history. During the first quarter of 1970, 21,818 persons visited the land of sugar-white beaches and near-perfect weather, compared with 16,062 during the same period a year ago, according to Kuiperi.

Tourists spent a total of 57,953 nights on the island during March, Kuiperi said, an average of 7.2 nights per person. Most of the visitors—6,221 persons—came from either the United States or Puerto Rico, while 1,029 came from nearby Venezuela.

Guatemala Offers Contrast Of Beauty and Violence

By LEWIS H. DIUGUID

ANTIGUA, Guatemala (WP) — The neatly conical volcanoes that punctuate the Guatemalan countryside seem apt sympols of the Central American nation — beautiful, yet always with a potential for violence.

Lately the violence has consisted of scattered guerrilla forays and kidnappings of a couple of American diplomats to retrieve captured dissidents. The West German ambassador was kidnapped and murdered. But, as U.S. Ambassador Nathaniel Davis says, they've yet to harm a tourist.

* * *

Historically, though, the violence has been natural, and its explosive ways have formed this city into an astonishing historical shrine.

The volcano that dominates the Antigua skyline is dormant. Even so, it destroyed the first city here, by the account of the survivors' descendants. The peak of the Fuego volcano was cupped out and a deep lake had formed there. In 1541, the mountain wall gave way and the tumbling lake waters inundated the town.

Two years later the Spanish founded here "the very noble and very loyal city of the Knights of St. James of the Kingdom of Goathemala," also known as Santiago de Los Caballeros.

It grew to perhaps 80,000 people as the capital of Central America. Each governor and churchman tried to outdo his predecessor architecturally until there were some 50 major ecclesiastical extravaganzas.

* * *

Earthquakes occurred from time to time, but in 1773 an epic quake destroyed the city. The king of Spain ordered the survivors to leave and the ruins to be levelled.

The second order was not carried out, but the first resulted in the founding of the present Guatemala City, about 40 minutes away now by modern highway.

Guatemala City prospered, and to some extent its architecture brings forward to the present day the record fixed in Antigua with the earthquake of 1773. Many of its older buildings were lost, however, in yet another disaster — the earthquake of 1917.

Nevertheless, the highland capital of perhaps 775,000 people is a pleasant and interesting staging point for air tours to Mayan ruins to the north, and car tours to Indian areas to the west, and to Antigua and Lake Atitlan in the same area.

* * *

Guatemala City's downtown hotels and restaurants are mediocre. The real attraction of this nation is its natural beauty and the visual history, and these the original capital offers in abundance.

Today about 21,000 people live in what is known as Antigua, in newer but unobtrusive housing scattered among the ruins that comprise a museum of 16th to 18th century New World Spanish architecture.

Guides are plentiful and inexpensive. Tourism seems to be the city's only industry. The youngest boys know Antigua's history, and often they can tell it in English.

* * *

They steer the many Latin and some U.S. tourists among such spectacles as:

- The Cathedral of Charles V, "King of Spain and Emperor of Alemania (Germany." This is said to have been the second cathedral in the Americas, begun in 1545. The nave tumbled in the earthquake, but Charles V's seal has been pieced together and raised again.
- The original San Carlos University, 1675. This was the third university founded in the New World.
- Temple and convent of Our Lady of Mercedes, 1548, reconstructed 1850. The courtyard contains the most intricate of many marvellous fountains, this one said to have contained enough fish in its system of ponds to help feed the populace.

For the tourists who prefer to stay nearby, rather than return to Guatemala City, there is the Hotel El Cortijo. It is a new hotel, but carefully wrought in the colonial manner with dark carved wood, white stucco and a fountain set against the Fuego volcano. A double room runs $20 per night, year-round.

Russians Eye Tourism Income

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union, seeking to put itself in big-league tourism this summer, is opening 100 towns to foreign visitors.

The special Soviet effort is related to the 100th anniversary this year of the birth of Lenin, founder of the Soviet state.

Leonid Stepanovich Lobanov of the Soviet mission told a committee meeting that Intourist, his government's tourist organization, is preparing a "special route" for foreign tourists that will take in all 16 capitals of Soviet republics.

These range from Yerevan, the capital of Armenia, near Turkey, to Almo Ata, capital of Kazakhstan, spanning an area from the Caspian Sea to China.

Even what Lobanov calls 'the enigmatic Siberia" will be opened up for visitors' inspection, he told an Economic and Social Council group discussing the development of tourism in member states.

The UN is playing an increasing role in the development of tourism, with various agencies assisting the developing nations to tap this monetary potential.

Separatist Leader Has the Makings of a Model Canadian

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP) — The leader of the Quebec independence movement is an energetic, headstrong man with the personal makings of a model Canadian.

Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois in the April 29 Quebec election, has well-developed French and English sides to his personality.

He speaks French and English with a fluency unmatched by other politicians at Quebec City, but says:

"My French side isn't really at home in English Canada. It's a question of feeling foreign and knowing that it won't change."

But if Mr. Levesque feels like a foreigner in English Canada, he says he doesn't feel like an alien among English-speaking people.

Complicated?

Not for Mr. Levesque, who says:

"I don't have the same complex in the United States. I don't expect people to understand if I start being my French me."

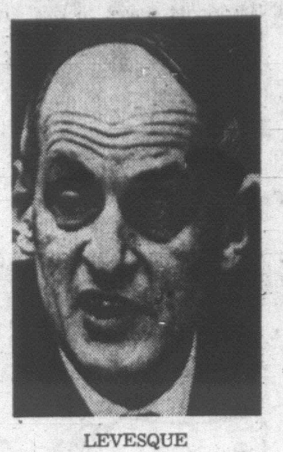
The French and English sides of Rene Levesque were shaped in a small railway town in the poverty-stricken Gaspe Peninsula.

DOESN'T FEEL ALIEN

He was born Aug. 22, 1922, at New Carlisle, where about 75 per cent of the population was English-speaking.

His father was a lawyer, in partnership with an Irish Canadian who became Mr. Levesque's godfather.

He now describes his godfather as "a self-made millionaire, a plunderer of the Gaspe, a bandit."



LEVESQUE
. . . independent personality

New Carlisle didn't make Mr. Levesque a separatist.

"There's one thing I got there: I never feel alien with an English-speaking person."

As a child, Mr. Levesque was a bookworm and a loner, with great admiration for his father who died when he was 14.

"For the times, my father was a fairly cultured guy. He had his own little library. I rarely saw a man more open-minded and tolerant."

Without a father, Mr. Levesque developed a strong spirit of personal independence that characterizes him to this day.

One of Mr. Levesque's New Carlisle schoolmates says:

"Rene was excessively brilliant, extremely sure of himself. He made us jealous. When we played cowboys and Indians he read thick books."

Described by a former teacher as "a charming student," Mr. Levesque also had the reputation of a tough fist-fighter.

Mr. Levesque recalls those days by saying: "I was mostly either reading or being obnoxious. For a lightweight, I was usually in there."

He obtained a BA at Laval University here, working part-time as a reporter and announcer for local radio.

From 1943 to 1945 he was overseas as "a very junior war correspondent," covering campaigns in France, Germany and Austria.

WAS TV PERSONALITY

In 1946 he returned to Canada to continue his career as a broadcaster. In 1951, he covered the Korean War.

By the late 1950s Mr. Levesque had become one of the most popular television personalities in French Canada.

As animator of a television documentary known as "Point de Mire" — Target — he provided background reports on current events around the world.

He got into provincial politics in 1960 and became one of the leading reform members of former premier Jean Lesage's Liberal government.

During six years of the so-called Quiet Revolution, Mr. Levesque held three portfolios —public works, natural resources and welfare.

In 1962 as resources minister, he led the drive for state purchase of several private hydroelectric companies.

Mr. Levesque mobilized his formidable talents as a communicator to help sell the nationalization idea in the 1962 election campaign.

LEFT LIBERAL PARTY

He and the Liberals told Quebecers the plan would help them become "maitres chez nous"—masters in our own house.

He split with the Lesage Liberals following election defeat in 1966, and his plans to make Quebecers their own masters grew bolder.

Quitting the Liberals in 1967, Mr. Levesque founded The Mouvement Souverniate-Association, forerunner of his Parti Quebecois.

Proposed was political independence of Quebec which he would link with the other Canadian provinces in a common market with a common currency.

Its program differed from the platforms of existing separatist groups in at least one major way: language rights.

While other separatist groups advocated abolition of English-language public schools, Mr. Levesque's MSA favored them.

The native of New Carlisle fought to get this language-rights clause in the platform of his Parti Quebecois, founded Oct. 14, 1968.

Does Mr. Levesque think it modern to lead a nationalist group in North America? He says:

"The English have always been surprised by the nationalism of other people. It's because theirs has been dominant for so long."

Activist Youth Favor Levesque

By BILL COULTHARD

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's activist youth, whose radicalism has led them into the streets to demonstrate in favor of French-Canadian nationalist themes, now are carrying their fight into the April 29 Quebec general election.

All indications are that the French-speaking youth vote is heavily behind the separatist Parti Quebecois, while the "old-line" Un on Nationale and Liberal parties are out in the cold on campuses.

The voting age in Quebec is 18.

Of the five parties contesting the election, the Parti Quebecois has without dispute the most effective campus organization.

Ca Urge—It's Urgent—a campus organization backing the Parti Quebecois for its "urgent" separatist policy alone, was able to rally 3,500 students at the University of Montreal three days before the separatist party officially began its campaign.

By comparison, a student Liberal said in an interview:

"As soon as you say you're a Liberal in student circles, you're treated as a sell-out. If you aren't for independence, you aren't a Quebecer. . . . It's pretty discouraging."

DRAWS ALL AGES

And while Rene Levesque, leader of the Parti Quebecois, has drawn all age groups to his campaign meetings across the province, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand and Opposition Leader Robert Bourassa, leaders of the Union Nationale and Liberal parties respectively, have had less success with young people.

Mr. Bertrand's opening campaign meeting was notable for the absence of young people, and at meetings since then youth attendance has been mainly by contingents of Parti Quebecois supporters who turned up to heckle.

Before the election was called, the Liberals had only three student clubs in Quebec junior colleges, although they had others on university campuses.

Since then they have claimed 42 campus organizations, but whether this indicates strong support among students is questionable. One of the groups had only 10 members recently.

Both the Union Nationale and the Liberal parties are able to pay student campaign workers, but the Parti Quebecois, with limited funds, has had to rely on enthusiasm of its supporters.

SEPARATISM SEEMS KEY

However, the youth enthusiasm for the Parti Quebecois seems rallied around the separatist option.

Ca Urge was formed to rally all separatist students to the Parti Quebecois—regardless of their support for the party's policies beyond Quebec independence.

Premier Bertrand and Creditiste Leader Camil Samson have attacked the Party Quebecois for harboring Communists and revolutionaries, a charge that may conform to the makeup of much of the party's student support.

For the Parti Quebecois, in spite of its separatist stance, is what many Quebec students consider a bourgeois party. Mr. Levesque urges his fellow Quebecers not to fear the economic changes of independence because, he argues, foreign investment in the "new sovereign state" will continue.

For many of his supporters in Quebec's colleges and universities, this does not represent independence at all—just as foreign ownership represents economic subjugation to radicals and left-of-centre groups in other parts of Canada.

PARIS (Reuters) — France has delivered 10 Mirage fighter-bombers to Spain, the first of 30 ordered by the Spanish government in February, French officials said. The $90,000,000 contract provides for further deliveries during the next two years.

Man Charged In Slaying Of Dancer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police Friday charged a 21-year-old man with non-capital murder in the shooting death Sunday of divorcee Jacqueline Ann Lampen, 27, a night club dancer.

A police spokesman identified the suspect as Andrew Greydon Bruce, of no fixed address. The spokesman said Bruce was arrested Thursday in North Vancouver.

Mrs. Lampen was killed in the basement of her home Sunday night by bullets from a .22-calibre semi-automatic pistol. Her seven-year-old daughter, Cheryl, left alone upstairs, heard the shots and telephoned a relative, who called police.

Reynolds Addition Approved

The Greater Victoria School Board has provisionally awarded a $78,389 contract to Herb Bate Ltd. for alterations and additions to Reynolds High School.

The approval came at a special meeting Thursday night, but final approval rests with the provincial treasury board.

Work is to cover building an art room in what was unfinished space, additions to teaching areas in woodwork and metalwork.

This will be the second expansion project since Reynolds opened three years ago.

Currently enrolling 720 students ranging from Grade 8 to 11, enrolment is expected to jump to 900 next year when the school opens a Grade 12 program.

Bate's bid was lowest of seven, highest of which was $101,600.

One Last Crash of Rifles as the Queen's Own Dies

By PAT DUFOUR

The drums, emblazoned with the regiment's battle honors, are marched on parade for the last time. The rifles held by the stern-faced soldiers crash in a final feu de joie.

Canada's oldest regiment dies.

Today in a ceremony at Work Point Barracks, the officers and men of the 1st Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, stand tall.

They celebrate the 110th birthday of their beginning on April 26, 1860.

They anticipate another beginning.

Monday, in an official ceremony the QORs become the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

At today's ceremony, outward signs of emotion are absent.

It is tonight, in the messes, that the Queen's Own will mourn their own passing.

In 1860 six rifle companies joined to become Canada's first militia rifle regiment. Those were the days of Canada's national birth pangs and the militia was to take the place of the departed British troops.

• • •

They were a dedicated lot and when they received their first blooding, fighting the Fenians in the Battle of Ridgeway, June 2, 1866, they were ready-equipped with valor, humor and loyalty.

Sir William Mulock, a sergeant at that battle, wrote of an incident that centred around the adjutant, a certain Capt. W. D. Otter, who was later to become Canada's first general.

The adjutant was fond of dashing around on his horse which one day shied, depositing him in the middle of a creek.

As the bedraggled officer scrambled out, a nearby rifleman remarked, sotto voce, "I've been here three days and that's the first dam' otter I've seen in this creek!"

It was this spirit that kept the men going as they trudged northward in 35-below weather to take their part in crushing the Northwest Rebellion.

Sir Henry Mill Pellatt, whose old home, Casa Loma, still stands as an historical site in central Toronto, was commanding officer when the regiment reached its 50th anniversary in 1910.

• • •

He decided to celebrate in style and financed a trip to England for the men. The aim was to show Britain that Canada stood ready at her side.

Toronto city council insured all the men while they were overseas. While the officers were expected to finance their own keep, riflemen were paid 25 cents a day, non-commissioned officers received an extra dime.

Today's commanding officer, Lt.-Col. Thorold Marsaw, is proud that the QORs were the first Canadian troops to see action in the First World War. The regiment was to have seven battalions over there before it was over.

The brought home six Victoria Crosses and 368 other decorations.

In the Second World War, Sgt. Aubrey Cosens was to become the regiment's seventh VC. He died shortly after he and the four remaining members of his platoon captured a vital position at the village of Mooshof in Holland on Feb. 26, 1945.

The battle honors of the regiment trace its path through the struggles of northwest Canada, and those of South Africa in 1899 and 1900, to 20 pitched stands during the First World War, and 19 hard-fought battles in the Second World War, beginning with the testing at Normandy.

Marsaw says "I'm rather anxious to encourage my people to start picking Patricias."

To this end, he's created a "brain-washing" room in the mess where officers can get familiar with the ways and traditions of the regiment to which they'll now belong.

He says the Patricia's executive have been zealous in efforts to welcome their new battalion.

"They've bought a new belt-buckle with their insignia, for every officer and man—and our cadets as well. They've also given us a loan to help finance the new red uniforms we'll now have to wear."

Red uniforms! The QORs have always worn forest green. Always the vanguard of the infantry, the forest green made them harder targets for snipers.

For the same reason, the QORs have never carried colors.

Used as a rallying point, they would have been a dead give-away to the enemy.

Instead they relied on drums, or more often a horn, which, in time of action, controlled the skirmishers.

Marsaw asserts that the disbanding of his regiment, along with the Black Watch and the Canadian Guards, is a good thing for his officers and men.

"With Canada's regiments reduced from six to three, the regimental family is bigger and the opportunities for the right men to become leaders, greater."

What of his men? Do they echo his sentiments?

In time they may, but now the wrench is too hard, too close.

Cpl. Joe Hickey, with 11½ years under his QOR belt buckle, says:

"If they're going to wipe out one unit, why don't they make a clean sweep of it and give us all numbers—from one to 10?"

A veteran of 19 years with the regiment, Sgt. Dan McAllister is more guarded.

He agrees with the colonel that he and his comrades have a job to do, irrespective of what regimental badge they wear.

But, he adds, "The QORs have always had a good name—from the Lakehead out to here."

He pauses for a while, draws another breath:

"It's going to be pretty hard for some of us old sweats to slow down from 140 to 120 paces."

• • •

The QORs march much faster than other regiments, the significance being that, as advance troops, they had no time to loiter on the way to battle, and had to move fast when returning to the main force.

Another corporal tells a significant story:

"As far as accepting Patricia history—in the Christmas holidays someone sent a picture of Lady Patricia Ramsay to the mess. It was flung out the window and was soon floating around the bay."

He, too, makes a reluctant concession to reality.

"Give us another year—and it should be easier."

Marsaw admits that today is one of mixed emotions.

"We don't want to see a tear."

The final testing comes Monday when General C. B. Ware arrives from Kingston, Ont.

Honorary Colonel of the Patricias, Ware will take part in a ceremony at the main gate.

• • •

There the queen's Own Rifles sign will come down, to be bundled along with other regimental treasures, and sent to the Toronto armories where the QORs militia will start a museum.

A new sign will take its place.

The officers and men at Work Point will gradually learn to absorb the traditions of the name on the new sign.

But tonight is different.

It will be spent reminiscing, recalling old pals and other days.

Perhaps the words that spurred them on in those other days will be sung:

Holding all the old traditions
Sanctioned by the Queen,
We've won glory through the ages
With the rifle green.

Lift the chorus, beat it onward,
Proudly swell the tone;
Hail to thee, our Mother Regiment,
Hail, O Hail, Queen's Own.

Vic West Residents Push for New School

Recent publicity over conditions at Monterey elementary has spurred efforts by Victoria West residents to get a new school in their area.

A parents' meeting is to be held in the school next week to discuss possible ways of getting government action.

FIRST PRIORITY

Parents and pupils have also written to Education Minister Donald Brothers asking why Victoria West elementary, Great Victoria school board's number one priority, was passed over in favor of Monterey.

Some Vic West parents complained earlier this week that release of $224,000 for Monterey was discrimination against their children's needs.

Vic West elementary, built in 1908, has 500 pupils.

FIRE HAZARD

The high-ceilinged old building is cold and drafty, heated by wood and coal furnace, is a fire hazard, lacks gymnasium and sickroom, has inadequate wiring and washrooms.

One parent, Mrs. Marjorie Moeskau, said parents should take their plea directly to Brothers.

Monterey PTA president John Harris said Friday he would support Vic West parents in their fight to get a new school.

OCEAN CEMENT CLOSES

Trades Lockout Forces Shutdown

One major supplier of building materials and ready mixed concrete shut down its Vancouver Island outlets Friday night and another will follow suit Monday to avoid operating at a loss during a province-wide lockout of tradesmen by the construction industry.

Victoria manager Lloyd J. Glassford of Ocean Cement Ltd. said the reason was "pretty self-evident with most of the general contractors affected" by the Construction Labor Relations Association lockout of seven building trades here and eight on the mainland.

"The lockout has meant a drop-off in our business to the point where we can't afford to keep our doors open. It was strictly a matter of economics," Glassford said.

Butler-Lafarge Ltd. president Ted Crampton said his company will cease its gravel and ready mix operations on the Island simply because "cement supplies have ceased to come."

Crampton added that the company's retail outlets will remain open in Victoria, Duncan and Nanaimo.

LAYING OFF

Glassford explained that construction material demand had been diminishing in the 11 days since seven unions were first locked out and that the company had been laying men off gradually.

In the past two weeks Ocean Cement laid off 50 hourly-paid workers in Victoria and 15 in Nanaimo, reducing the staff to none at quitting time Friday.

Victoria manager Ed Phillips, of Amalgamated Construction Association, said the shutdown by Ocean Cement would cut off more of the "spotty construction that's been going on these past 10 days."

CARPENTERS

The unions, represented through B.C.-Yukon and Vancouver Island Building Trades Councils, were relying on a no-picketing agreement in order to keep construction job sites open to those trades that are not locked out. Of these, the carpenters are the largest and most influential group with some 9,000 members in B.C.

But their contract expires Thursday, after which they could strike or be locked out following 72-hour statutory notice.

This would add a significant number of idle workers to those which the unions up to now have claimed to be marginal.

The locked out unions are teamsters, laborers, tunnel and rock workers, operating engineers, bricklayers and helpers, cement finishers and insulators, plus plumbers up-Island and on the mainland.

Arthur Mayse . . .

ONE EVENING THIS week, a party of Uvic undergraduates took advantage of a lull between exams to drop in at a local pub. All of them, according to the account passed on to me, are 19 or older. For some, it was a first testing of their legal right to knock back a beer.

As one of the group lays out the sequence, the students were asked to produce identification, and did so.

But the waiter wasn't satisfied. He wanted to see their birth certificates. They couldn't oblige him. Neither could I under the same circumstances. Some people carry their birth certificates, but a lot of us don't.

The waiter then refused to set 'em up.

The young people kept their cool. There were girls in the party, and anyway, they weren't out for trouble.

As they were leaving, the waiter called to them, "Better get back to your school books, kids."

Brawls have been touched off by less. To their credit, the students ignored the remark. They took themselves off to another sudsery.

"But we were pretty mad," said my informant, "and we're wondering whether this kind of thing is behind some of the beer parlor incidents since drinking age was lowered."

He adds that he and his friends met a different reception of their next stop. They got their beer . . . to which, like it or lump it, they were by law entitled.

IF YOU'VE FED WILD birds in winter — and please don't during the rest of the year when natural food is plentiful — you're familiar with the pert junco.

He or she as the case may be is the two-toned grey one with the black cap.

Last December, Mrs. R. J. Alm of 1619 Ash Road found a junco at the foot of her basement stairs. It had been mauled, apparently by a cat, and was more dead than alive.

Its tail had been ripped out. Most of the feathers were gone from its underbody. One wing was broken, and a foot hung by a shred.

Mrs. Alm took it in, even though she expected it to die at any moment. She fitted a box with a soft lining, and set seeds and water handy.

Amazingly, the bird survived. When it was stronger, Mr. Ash amputated the dangling foot.

Today, full-feathered once more, the Junco occupies a cage in the Alm's house. It won't fly again — the injured wing mended but doesn't function — but it hops about on one foot, and flirts with its reflection in the cage mirror.

"Sometimes we hang the cage outside," says Mrs. Ash "but the bird likes to be where the action is. It sings along with the household appliances."

The junco thrives on oatmeal and budgie seed, plus a daily wedge of orange and a dab of peanut butter.

Some tragedies can't be entirely mended. Pierre, saucily named for the PM, couldn't last a day if turned loose outdoors to fend for himself.

If some other predator didn't snatch him, a cat would.

I'M NOT RECOMMENDING this experiment, mind, but if anyone insists on learning the effects of pollution in a painful and personal way, he has but to eat a bad clam.

A year or so ago, without intent, I put away some steamed little necks from a low-tide beach that looked safe, but wasn't. I paid with a bad night.

The moral, emphasized by British Columbia's commercial fisheries branch, is, look before you dig or gather.

Any flat below a residential area served by septic tanks should be avoided.

"People arent careful enough where they get shellfish," a department spokesman told me. "If you have any reason to think you may be taking a chance on a mess of clams, leave them strictly alone."

Another suggestion even though you may be fond of oysters on the half shell, boil them before frying or serving in a stew unless you're sure they came from a safe area.

It's a pit that such instructions should be required, but failure to observe them can be painful if not downright dangerous.

As I learned, the hard way!

Hydro Cost Story 'Unreasonable' Say Engineers

B.C. Hydro's figures comparing costs of putting transmission lines overhead and underground present an "unreasonable" picture of a local issue, says the Vancouver Island branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada.

It is the branch's second statement to the Times in opposition to three miles of steel poles 75 feet high B.C. Hydro proposes along Interurban and Burnside Roads to carry 132,000-volt transmission lines.

"The members of this branch of the Institute submit that this cost comparison is unreasonable," says the letter from chairman P. W. E. Campbell.

ADDITIONAL COST

"When compared with the $30 to $35 million cost of generating and transmitting power from Jordan River to the Greater Victoria area, the additional cost of installing underground wiring (say from the George Tripp substation to the Horsey substation) is in the order of $940,000 more.

"In this context the additional cost comes to approximately 3 per cent of the total project."

The branch joins residents along the proposed line of towers in condemning the overhead lines as an ugly clutter and notes 10 miles of underground wiring is currently being completed in Vancouver through what is essentially a residential area, similar to the one which would be affected in Victoria.

NOT INDUSTRIAL

"The contrast is intensified when one considers that Victoria is not an industrial city, but one said by many to be unique in Canada, of great beauty and the capital of British Columbia—and as we are talking about money, a city much concerned with the tourist industry," says Campbell's letter.

He says the branch would like to see the entire three miles of transmission lines placed underground but at the very least the portion between the two substations.

"The additional cost . . . is a relatively small percentage of the allocation for the supply of more power in this area."

As for the five residents of Munns Road who are opposing the line because Hydro plans to expropriate and demolish their homes when they run the line south of Prospect lake, they're getting ready for a public rally in Hampton Park at 3 p.m. Sunday.

P. A. Codyre, spokesman for the group, says he expects up to 5,000 people to attend the meeting in the park near the Burnside-Tillicum intersection.

NIGHTS GET LATER: CHANGE YOUR CLOCKS

Spring ahead — fall back.

That's one way to remember which way to twist the clock's hands before going to bed tonight.

Daylight Saving time begins at 2 a.m. Sunday morning and this being spring, move the clock an hour ahead.

You'll lose an hour's sleep — but gain long sunny evenings.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Tales from the Vienna Woods . . .

Think we'll have to start a serial to tell you about all the lovely new clothes which have arrived at Wilson's from Austria . . . because it certainly is impossible to do it all in one fell swoop! . . . Suffice to say that seldom have we seen so many intriguing clothes all at once . . . There's the light-heartedness of Vienna in the gaily-striped alpaca dresses we watched being unpacked this week . . . short-sleeved little dresses you'll wear now and all summer . . . red and white vertical stripes on a mint ground . . . and navy and white on turquoise . . . The $35 price tag seems to us remarkably reasonable for such a delightful little frock . . . A two-piece alpaca dress, especially flattering to the larger figure, is camel color with red and white V knit into the front . . . short sleeves and collared neck . . . Noticed one of these in turquoise, too, with yellow and white contrast . . . $60 . . . Another alpaca . . . one-piece . . . is navy with camel and white bands streaking down the front . . . polo neckline with silvery buttons . . . This, too, would take pounds off anyone's figure . . . in case you feel you need to! . . . While you're in Wilson's be sure to see the dainty new alpaca cardigans . . . creamy white, with embroidered flower springs . . . in two different styles . . . They're simply lovely! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government Street, 383-7177.

For tropical evenings: A white cotton lace pants outfit . . . tunic belted with cerise satin sash.

Now see MORE Wayne Ngan at The Handloom . . .

Many of you have undoubtedly seen Wayne Ngan's one-man show of pottery currently featured at the Art Gallery . . . This young man is now rated one of the top potters in Canada . . . His work exudes immense vitality, and expresses his love of, and closeness to, nature . . . Now you can see . . . and buy . . . a lot more of his soul-satisfying creations at The Handloom . . . Mrs. Higgin having been fortunate enough to acquire a fine collection of Ngan's work . . . We saw a number of perfectly beautiful tea bowls in the Raku tradition which originates in the Orient, and is seldom seen here . . . The glaze has a lovely translucent lutre with surprising glowing undertones . . . You could use these tea bowls for a number of purposes . . . Then there are some magnificent fruit bowls . . . much like those now on display at The Art Gallery . . . Floor vases . . . Branch jars . . . one with an interesting combed design . . . another in a lovely cracked glaze . . . Beautiful jugs . . . Classic style vases with cut sides . . . A gorgeous Raku vase almost bell-shaped . . . A trio of beautifully proportioned brown stoneware covered casseroles . . . a little covered box which would make a delightful butter dish, among other uses . . . All Ngan's covered pieces have extremely well-fitting lids . . . and there's almost a sensual delight in handling these lovely ceramic vases, jars and bowls! . . . The Handloom, 18 Centennial Square, 384-1011, and Empress Hotel, 384-1518.

Try the new look of boots worn with short dresses and midi lengths alike. Boots are supple and well-fitting as shoes.

These plates give fish panache . . .

Undoubtedly one can live without fish plates . . . just as we've learned to forego the mandatory fish knives and forks of our youth . . . but they do add something to the gustatory delights of fish-eating, don't they? . . . We saw some very attractive fish plates at Sydney Reynolds the other day . . . German porcelain, with a different species of fish decorating each plate of a set of six . . . and extraordinarily good value at just $9 for the complete set! . . . Still on the subject of plates . . . noticed a lovely series of service plate adorned with Constable and Watteau "love story" scenes . . . Semi-porcelain and tagged at $3 apiece . . . while Gainsborough's "Pinky" and "Blue Boy" plates may be yours for $2.75! . . . Any of these would make attractive cake plates . . . If your husband's addicted to hunting, how about acquiring a game platter . . . pictured with deer, pheasants, hounds, etc. . . . to make the serving of said hunting prowess even more gala? . . . Another nice thing for a husband is one of Sydney Reynolds' jumbo-sized cups and saucers bearing hunting scenes, ships, etc. . . . Great for the man who likes a large cup of tea or coffee . . . Nice for serving soup in, too . . . These are really good . . . and very reasonable at $3 . . . Sydney Reynolds Ltd., 801 Government Street, 383-3931.

Amalfi shoes lead the foot parade . . .

Munday's tell us that of all the makes of fine shoes they sell . . . Amalfis are still the favorites of Victoria women (and of Vancouver women who come over here expressly to buy them) . . . which doesn't surprise us because Amalfi shoes, from Italy, are so terrifically smart, well-fitting and foot-pampering! . . . This spring the new styles are particularly flattering, we think . . . Franzo . . . a two-tone, high-fronted shoe with tassel tie trim, has a higher, slimmer heel . . . comes in black with bone and navy with grey . . . "Falbo" is a two-eyelet tie (though you slip right into it without untieing) in white with either tan or grey tip and heel . . . "Unata" is a pump with open shank and gold ornament . . . black patent and bone calf . . . "Cappio" is a very pretty sling with open sides and instep strap held with brass rings . . . Comes in bone, white and navy calf . . . Spectators are fashionable again, and "Marata" is a very goodlooking one . . . woven leathrer in bone with tan or white with navy . . . A high-tongued shoe with gold trim comes in very soft white or Sahara calf, and is called "Favola" . . . white "Sicolo" is a woven calf T-strap with sling back, rather like old-favorite "Sardo" . . . which with other popular Amalfi styles . . . is still carried by . . . Munday's 1203 Douglas Street, 383-2211.

STRAP HOLDERS

Dublin designer Irene Gilbert makes certain that no lingerie straps are going to slip into view to spoil the purity of her beautifully cut necklines.

Miss Gilbert keeps these underpinnings in their proper place with the addition of petite lingerie clasps, or to be blunt, strap holders.

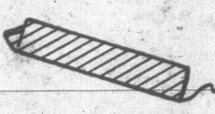
These discreet clasps are made of lining fabric of which the dress itself is lined. They work wonders to keep lingerie straps from showing and they also serve to anchor the dress and prevent it from slipping about.

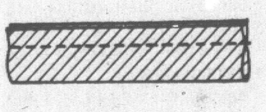
When Miss Gilbert cuts a wide square neckline she takes out a double bit of insurance. The lingerie clasps are not only attached to the inside of the dress at the shoulders, but are also sewn inside the neck edge at its widest point.

To make lingerie clasps:

For each clasp, cut a straight strip of lining fabric 1¾ in. long and ¾ in. wide.

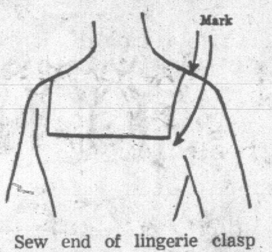
Fold strip in half lengthwise, right sides together and stitch a scant ¼ in. from fold.



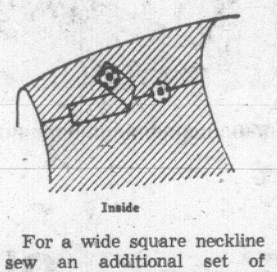


Turn strip right side out and press so seam is along one edge. Turn in raw edges at ends and slip-stitch.

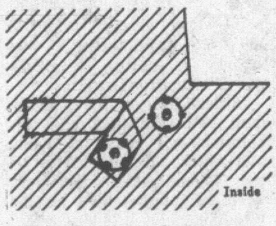
Before sewing lingerie clasps to inside of dress, try dress on over the lingerie you will wear with it and mark with pins where you wish the clasps to be positioned.



Sew end of lingerie clasp farthest from neck to shoulder. Sew half of snap to free end. Sew other half of snap to seam beneath, as shown.



For a wide square neckline sew an additional set of clasps inside neck in same manner.



Clasps must always open toward neck.

Bunny Bounced Because of Views

CHICAGO (UPI) — Shelly Schlicker, 23, looks like most female employees of Playboy Magazine. One might say "good-looking."

Thursday Miss Schlicker stood in front of Playboy's near north side headquarters with her fist raised. With her were members of Chicago's women's liberation.

She said she had been fired by Playboy for her activities with "women's lib." She also directed a blast at her former hutch master, Hugh Hefner.

"Hefner has made millions selling this airbrushed image of women to insecure men who are taught to want a playful pet rather than a person," Miss Schlicker said.

"But it won't work. We will no longer sell ourselves in return for a pair of ears and a tail and a condescending pat on the behind."

Michael Cohn, Miss Schlicker's former supervisor, then invited the curbside news conference into the Playboy building to hear the male side of the story.

Inside a plush, 10th-floor office, Cohn said Miss Schlicker was fired not for her activities on behalf of women, but for copying and circulating a confidential Playboy memo.

Miss Schlicker said the memo was important because it called for a "non-objective" article on women's liberation in the May issue of the magazine.

Cohn refused to discuss the nature of the memo because it was, he said, confidential.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Hooked on Junk

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am turning to you with a situation which has gone on for years, but now it's become unbearable.

My mother's hobby is "junking." For years she haunted thrift shops, stores where sales are going on, and also antique shops. She has found some items which she has restored and resold, which is fine, as it kept her busy and she's even made it pay.

Now the problem is this. She keeps bringing me stuff I cannot use and do not want. For instance, partial sets of dishes, beat up pots and pans, and today she brought me a hideous orange knit dress which was apparently somebody's first attempt at knitting.

My father tells me that she now goes to the grocery stores where sales are advertised and she lugs home large quantities of groceries. He says their basement is lined with 20-pound sacks of sugar. What would you do? Thanks. — Exhausted.

DEAR EXHAUSTED: I would get her to a doctor for a complete examination, after having alerted the doctor to what you've told me. Her behavior is symptomatic of a mental disturbance. And hurry, before her collection starts to collect rodents.

DEAR ABBY: Parents complain because their kids are bull-headed, won't listen, and refuse to profit from somebody else's experience. Well, here's a switcheroo for you. One of the parents died after a long and happy marriage and the remaining parent is now getting himself into a mess like you wouldn't believe. It's sickening to watch. And nobody can tell him anything either. Kids at last have the excuse that they are young. But what's the parents' excuse — Disgusted.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Second childhood, maybe? Or the same excuse the kids have — lack of experience.

DEAR ABBY: I am 49 and Henry (made up name) is 52. We've been married for 33 years.

A year ago Wilma, a friend and fellow worker of Henry's, lost her husband, so Henry has been driving a mile out of his way each morning and evening to take her to and from work. Wilma doesn't drive. She is well-groomed, attractive, always smiling and very friendly.

For some time now I have had the feeling that Henry has been enjoying Wilma's company too much. On his day off he seems restless and bored, and is constantly thinking up excuses to go to her house. (She has the same day off.)

When I ask him if there is anything between them he denies it, but he looks guilty.

She is 65, but looks much younger. How can I get him to forget her? Should I ignore it, or try to get to the bottom of it? — Jealous.

DEAR JEALOUS: Ignore it. If she's 65, she should be retiring soon and the rides to and from work will cease. Out of sight. Out of mind.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Tie-Dying—The Craft That Became Couture

UNDOING

'It's So Easy No One Believes Me'

by ELIZABETH BENNETT

One of the nicest things about tie-dying is that anyone can do it.

"People won't believe" me when I tell them how easy it is to tie-dye," said Shirley Brown.

Shirley, a Montreal public relations representative in Victoria recently as part of a two-week tour of the Western provinces. Her job was to arrange demonstrations and let Canadian women in on this latest twist to do-it-yourself fashions.

Tie-dying is hardly new, but it is going through major revival.

"In New York, I'm told, the teen-agers hold tie-dye parties," Shirley said.

"Every tie-dye pattern is unique, too," she said. "A friend in Montreal offered me $100 if I could reproduce a pattern exactly. His money is safe; I wouldn't even waste time trying.

"You don't have to worry about matching seams with tie-dying, either. Just make up the garment first (if it isn't made up already) and make the knots over the seams."

Peter Benchley writing for Newsweek described tie-dying as being "as old as ancient Asia, as primitive as backwoods Nigeria and as new as now."

He continues that "thousands of year ago, people learned to liven up their loin cloths and decorate their muumuus by tying the fabric in knots and dipping in into dye, creating patterns of different colors. In the 1920s, children were taught tie-dying as a handicraft, along with knot-tying and lanyard-weaving.

"The first hint of a major revival of tie-dye came during the mid-60s in . . . the Haight-Ashbury district of San Francisco, where the hippies found that a little dye and a little ingenuity could turn a tacky rag into a thing of beauty."

It wasn't long before haute couture discovered tie-dying and skilled tie-dyers began to do designs for designers, Jacques Kaplan even included tie-dyed mink coats in his spring collection.

But, the projects Shirley Brown has in mind are not nearly as ambitious.

All she wants to do is get those old work shirts or soft cloth hats out of the rag-bag and back into bright, new — tie-dyed — careers.

Shirley Brown of Montreal models a hat and chiffon scarf she tie-dyed herself.

One Short Lesson Enough for Basics

A recent tie-dying demonstration is a local department store featured Dorothy Ray, who has been showing Victorians how to use almost everything from new food products to furniture finishing kits for the past 16 years.

Shirley Brown, who organized tie-dying demonstrations all over Canada, only had time to give Dorothy one lesson, but that was enough to cover the basic techniques.

These pictures were taken during a practice session and shortly after the photographer left Dorothy proved that it is almost impossible to tie-dye a mistake.

"I don't like the colors," she commented after undoing one cluster of knots in which she had had no confidence at all, "but the pattern is nice."

To begin tie-dying one needs:

The article of fabric to be dyed;

Rubber bands and-or string;

Dye;

Shallow pans of glass, metal or enamel (for really big things a bathtub is best, and will come clean with a chlorine bleach cleanser);

An eye dropper.

For complicated tie-dying one might also need bleach or color remover, plastic wrap to protect large areas of the fabric and a stove or hot plate to keep the dye warm.

Dorothy wasn't wearing rubber gloves, but as her fingers turned muddy purple, she noted that it would be a very good idea to do so.

The fabric should first be washed to remove sizing or dirt and should be damp when knotted to help the dye penetrate.

The easiest knot is the rosette — one lump of material is tied off with string or elastic. The fabric under the elastic stays the original color, forming a circular pattern.

The doughnut is a variation on the rosette. The centre of the rosette is punched in so it is caught under the elastic, making concentric circles.

Stripes can be made by either gathering or folding the material and tying at intervals.

A fourth kind of knot, not illustrated here, is made by puckering the material between the fingers to form many little pouches and wrinkles, and holding them all in place with a rubber band or string.

The string or elastic protects the fabric under it from the dye, but a small amount of color can be dribbled on with an eye-dropper, as Dorothy shows in the second picture. She spread the rubber band slightly so the color slipped between to create a marbled effect.

The piece of cloth Dorothy used for these pictures was folded double before the knot was made to simulate an already assembled dress or blouse.

As the last picture shows, even though there was only one knot, the designs created are not identical.

Though the instructions may say to keep the dye bath at a simmer, it can be allowed to cool to lukewarm for heat-sensitive fabrics. When the dye is cool, however, the fabric must be left in longer if a deep, permanent shade is to be acheived.

Still on the subject of shade, one must remember that once dried, the fabric can be many shades lighter than when it was wet.

When several dye baths are used, one should begin with the lightest color and proceed to the darkest.

After each dye bath, the fabric should be thoroughly rinsed in cold water to remove excess dye.

Dying will not automatically hide a stain as the stained section will absorb dye at a different rate, and show it.

Preparation of the fabric, then, must include removing stains, and if necessary, color, as well as removing sizing and dirt.

Further information on tie-dying techniques is available from the Consumer Service Department, Canada Starch Company, 1216 Drummond Street, Montreal.

IODE Still Adapting In Changing World

HAMILTON (CP) — The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire has continuously adapted to a changing world and is not going to stop, the order's Ontario president said Thursday.

Mrs. R. Bruce Craik of Dundas told 500 members at the IODE's 50th anniversary banquet: "We have, in many instances, been ahead of the times or situations.

"By the time we are asked what is new, we consider it as part of our way of life and an unaccountable number of people have benefited."

She cited as examples, meals-on-wheels for the aged and work with Indians and Eskimos.

The order now is looking into such modern problems as pollution and drug abuse, Mrs. Craik said.

"A Business Built on Customer Confidence and Goodwill"

'Queen Not Just a Cabbage' Says Author Andrew Duncan

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — The British book world is agog at the prospect of a literary bombshell due to explode next month with corrosive comments on the Royal Family, including what the Queen is supposed to think of Prime Minister Wilson.

Author Andrew Duncan, 29-year-old journalist son of a BBC radio producer, spent a year and some £5,000 ($13,000) trailing the Queen on 50,000 miles of royal tours and engagements. His book, The Reality of Monarchy, is already being serialized in Look magazine under its American title, The Queen's Year. It will be published here by Heinemann May 11.

Duncan claims to have received "a tremendous amount of co-operation" from the Royal Family, though the book is not officially authorized. He talked to a number of them informally as well as to close friends of the royal circle.

Duncan says in the book that Wilson began his relationship with the Queen on a "folksy" note by asking if he could bring his wife when he formally kissed hands on his appointment as prime minister. His father and sister also attended the Buckingham Palace function.

Duncan quotes a close observer as saying: "The Queen thinks Harold's a prosy old bore, a petit bourgeois."

QUEEN ANNOYED

In a Daily Telegraph interview, Duncan said that the Queen was "upset and annoyed" by Wilson's attitude on Rhodesia and Anguilla.

"I have tried to show that the Queen has political views of her own and is not just a cabbage," he added. "She is a much more intelligent woman than people think."

In the book he also says the Queen felt "uneasy" with Conservative Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, who tended to "act granddad at their weekly audiences, discussing affairs of state while looking directly over her head at pictures on the wall or a clock."

"There was also the suspicion he didn't tell her anything."

ELIZABETH II
. . . views of her own

Duncan, whose book contains on-the-record interviews with Princess Margaret, Prince Philip, Prince Charles and Lord Snowdon, Margaret's husband, believes the Queen is worried about the future of the monarchy and that the Royal Family sees the Commonwealth as a doubtful factor in the future.

"At this stage I think the Royal Family would rather be completely rid of it," said Duncan in another published interview. He said the Royal Family went off on the Australian tour with "an Auld Lang Syne feeling," realizing that Australia "would be a republic in 10 years."

Duncan says the Queen is seriously concerned with what people think of her, whereas Philip views the public with aristocratic detachment.

"Personally, I have a high regard for the Queen," he says. "She is not marvellous, just very pleasant, but I think she feels she could be our last monarch."

But the book contains acid little sidelights on the Queen such as this quote from "a member of the privy council":

"You can't get it into her head that she is supposed to be working, poor thing. She finds it a bore and I don't blame her. We barge in on her privacy. She feels there's no distinction between Labor and Conservative. They're all below her anyway."

Similarly, a "close friend" is quoted as saying: "She looks a bit miserable at times because she's been trained to resist emotion of any kind, like a Grenadier guardsman.

"She throws all her affection into her dogs, but she can't do it with human beings because of her upbringing."

I don't think the Queen will like what I have said. Nor will other members of the family, but I hope they will realize this is supposed to be a serious and constructive criticism.

Mary Quant, who practically invented the miniskirt, kissed the knee goodbye with her last collection. The show stealers at her all-midi-maxi show were these knickerbocker suits with high-buttoned boots. (AP Wirephoto)

Quixotic Quant Quashes the Mini

LONDON (CP)—Mary Quant, the British fashion designer who invented the miniskirt, said goodbye to the thigh when she displayed her autumn collection Wednesday.

Some of her dresses were so long that the fashion designer also bade farewell to the knee.

She showed an all midi and maxi collection. The new Quant clothes are nearly all in knit jersey, worn without bras and outlining every skinny curve. A few have scoop necklines, but about the only naughty number in the show was a black jersey midi dress called "Zelda" which was left unbuttoned behind nearly up to the waist.

Newest idea is a midi in jersey which boasts not one but two brilliantly printed gypsy overskirts. They tie on in layers.

Quant's show stealers are a natural chamois leather knickerbocker suit with laced Buffalo Bill boots, and a frontier outfit also in chamois with V-pointed skirt and jacket laced together at the seams.

A lot of nearly ankle-length knit dresses are accompanied by matching long scarves with just a touch of pattern at each end. An elongated sweater dress in brown jersey is called "Higgins," from the garment made famous by Rex Harrison in My Fair Lady.

Flattery Fails to Calm 'Cuddly' Women Reporters

OTTAWA (UPI) —Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey fideted a bit Thursday as he stood between two pretty blonde newswomen under hot television lights.

The minister, a genial Irishman from Montreal, was trying to explain his remark Wednesday night that the women's liberation movement has gone too far when women "turn their saucepans into swords."

Cornered by two lady members of the press gallery, Mackasey tried to explain that he was not against women's liberation but only against women losing their "cuddly feminity."

One reporter asked him, 'Did you mean to imply that women should stick to their saucepans?"

"Well, I suggested that I prefer my women to be soft and cuddly and pretty — like you," Mackasey said in a hopeful attempt to flatter the young ladies.

Should women "stay in their place" by "sticking to their saucepans?"

"A woman can be fun and pretty and beautiful and charming and still make her point politically," Mackasey said.

"A woman does not have to be an amazon to make her point politically."

Addressing the National Secretaries Association in Montreal Wednesday night, Mackasey had said: "The object of the feminist movement should be to produce an understanding of woman's place in the 20th century — not to produce a race of women who will, at any given moment, turn their saucepans into swords."

Mackasey refused to answer questions earlier in the House of Commons, but he was trapped by Leslie Empringham of Standard Radio News and Jane Sumbera of United Press International as he left the house.

The minister is married and the father of four children, two of them girls.

The Germains first met in February, 1894. "She fell to my charm," he says.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Suffocating 'Fuzz of Faith'

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

The heroine of Patrick White's novel of a few years ago, Voss, is a young Australian, Laura Trevelyan, who, despite a very sheltered upbringing, in her late adolescence rejects the Christian religion in which she has been so delicately nurtured.

The author says that the cause of her tossing Christianity right out of her life was that "she was suffocated by the fuzz of faith."

●

"Suffocated by the fuzz of faith." That expression makes me very uncomfortable. It suggests a dull, dry, choking something which comes out of religious practice.

It points to all those vapid pieties and ingrown respectabilities which clutter up the religious life. It hints at all those petty jealousies and unlovely snobberies and niggling criticisms which corrupt church life at all levels.

●

Bishop Stephen Neill, one of the more influential Christian writers of our time, says, "If I were not already a Christian and a churchman, I think that what more than anything else would keep me back from accepting the responsibilities of church membership would be the apparently irredeemable triviality of the churches."

The church does have a remarkable tendency to specialize in the trivial and the inconsequential. Many people do choke on the fuzz which is exuded as the ecclesiastical machinery grinds. I suspect that this fuzz keeps as many thoughtful people from Christian faith as do intellectual difficulties.

So much of our church activity seems desolatingly dull to anyone not conditioned to think that simply because it is church activity it must be just dandy. So much of our church life today is unimaginative, uninteresting, unexciting. We have become dreadfully genteel in our practice of religion. The vitality of the church today is sapped by the safe, trivial conventionality which marks about two-thirds of all church activity.

●

The Church must take very seriously the criticism to which it is now subjected. But it must not let itself be bullied by outside critics or by a self-appointed avant garde within, by all those bright people who affect the disgusteder-than-thou pose.

The church must try to discriminate between informed criticism and uninformed criticism, between responsible criticism and irresponsible criticism, between criticism which is founded in concern for the cause of Jesus Christ and criticism which is merely an attempt to climb aboard a currently popular bandwagon and take a few self-advertising whacks at the drum.

●

Despite the fact that I often choke rather badly on the fuzz of faith, I am really quite optimistic about the church. I am convinced that the church has the tough resiliency, the flexibility, and, when the chips are down, the aggressive courage, to play a creative role in the new age.

There is much evidence today which indicates that the churches are in for a period of great difficulty. During the coming two or three decades they will suffer appreciable decline in institutional well-being.

But much of this decline will be a throwing out of much of the excess baggage and a dismantling of much of fuzz-producing machinery.

I am convinced that by the end of this century the Church will be institutionally slimmer than it is now, but that it will be exercising a far more effective program of witness and mission and compassionate service than it is today.

This conviction comes out of a feeling that the amount of suffocating fuzz caused by religious practice is discernably decreasing.

CONVERT TO SPEAK

Nicky Cruz, featured in the best-selling book The Cross and the Switchblade by David Wilkerson, will speak in Central Junior Secondary School Friday and Saturday, May 8 and 9 at 8 p.m.

"Nicky Cruz has a story that deserves to be heard by everyone," says the Victoria chapter, Christian Businessmen's Association, which is sponsoring the talk.

Cruz is described as "a hardened gang leader of the notorious Mau-Maus, considered the most dangerous large grang in New York City."

Subsequently he was converted to Christianity and is now an evangelist.

Pope Denounces Riot Coverage

VATICAN CITY (AP) — An angry Pope Paul accused the press today of turning news about his visit to Sardinia "upside down" because of the riot by anarchists.

He denounced Italian dailies that played up reports of the violence in today's editions as "no longer papers of information but deformation."

He insisted that his reception in Cagliari, Sardinia, Friday was "very cordial, very beautiful" and said he experienced a "pressure of affection."

Then, his voice firm and bearing unmistakable tones of anger, he said: "The newspapers, in fact those that call themselves great papers, have absolutely turned the news upside down."

Virtually all Italian dailies today gave the riot more emphasis than the rest of the Pope's 10-hour visit to Sardinia. Conservative newspapers played the riot up the most. Il Messaggero of Rome exclaimed in a huge banner headline: "The Pope Contested."

NOT AIMED AT POPE

The pontiff spoke shortly after the Vatican spokesman said that rocks thrown by anarchists during the riot were not aimed at Pope Paul.

At the same time, Vatican observers expected security around the Pope to be tightened from now on every time he leaves the Vatican.

The incident Friday was unique in Paul's seven-year reign. Never on any of his other eight trips outside Italy has violence broken out near him.

A battle between police and 100 anarchists and sympathizers erupted 200 yards from a church where the Pope had just finished addressing 4,000 cheering residents of a slum neighborhood.

Some witnesses said they saw some rocks thrown in the direction of the crowd and the Pope's motorcade.

Rt. Rev. Fausto Vallainc, who accompanied the Pope on the visit to Sardinia, said today: "The demonstrators directed their action against the police, not the pontiff."

Oregon Choir Visits City

Eighty teen-agers comprising the Clackamas High School Choir of Portland, Oregon, toured Victoria's Wax Museum Friday; then went for a swim at the Crystal Garden.

They arrived here aboard the motor vessel Coho from Port Angeles.

Today at 8 p.m. they will give a free concert of popular and classical music in Metropolitan United Church. Sunday at 11 a.m. they will sing with Metropolitan's Sanctuary Choir directed by organist Eric Boothroyd.

They leave for home aboard the Coho Sunday at 5 p.m.

Confirmation Services Set

Bishop George R. Calvert, formerly of Calgary, will preach and confirm a group of boys and girls at the Anglican Church of St. David-by-the-Sea, Cordova Bay, Sunday at 10:30 a.m.

Afterwards there will be a public reception in the Fellowship Hall.

Hashish Traffickers Jailed After Undercover Operation

A 23-year-old man was sentenced to one year in prison and his 20-year-old female companion to three months by Judge William Ostler Friday for trafficking in hashish.

Corey A. Marcil, 23, of no fixed address, and Charlotte K. Briley, 20, of Evesham, Sask., were arrested as part of the 48 warrants issued March 24 for persons trafficking in various illicit drugs on the Island.

The warrants were issued at the conclusion of a four-month RCMP undercover investigation.

RCMP Constable Terrance Driscoll testified that he and fellow constable William McBratney bought one gram of hashish from the two accused near Centennial Square Jan. 23.

Driscoll said he and McBratney approached Marcil and Briley in the square and asked if there was any hashish to be bought.

Miss Briley when directed by Marcil led the two officers to where the drug had been cached in a drainpipe on a Cormorant Street building and produced a cough drop box with several cubes of the substance asking the two to take their choice.

The officers, Driscoll said, selected one gram and paid $5 for it.

Ostler said he thought there could be a distinction drawn between the two defendants, Miss Briley being under the influence of Marcil through relationship and personality, but added that the two were carrying on a business in the illicit drug.

Isnate Osterreicher, 77, of 2549 Graham, was fined $50 for shoplifting.

He pleaded guilty April 7 to taking three items of a total value of $4.29 from the Canada Safeway store, 2635 Quadra, March 12 without paying for them.

Ostler in making the judgment said he thought it an appropriate case for a nominal fine as a sufficient deterrent.

The judge pointed out that in most shoplifting convictions fines are substantial but in this "exceptional" case he was taking into consideration the age and circumstances of the accused.

Russell Tschritter, 24, of 946 Ellery, was fined $400 for the possession of marijuana.

He pleaded guilty April 8 when he appeared in court to having to a plastic bag with some of the substance inside in a coat pocket. He was searched by police April 7.

* * *

John A. Burns, 20, of 2700 Lansdowne, was fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to driving an auto while his license was under suspension.

He was stopped on Hampshire Road April 23 and refused, at first, to show police his driver's license.

When asked by the investigating officer if his license was under suspension, he admitted it was.

John G. Spink, 23, of 1476 Finlayson, was fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to shoplifting.

He was observed taking several small items of a total value of $1.56 from the Canada Safeway store, 455 Simcoe, April 23 and leave the store without paying for them.

Walter Walker and Sons Ltd., 739 Pandora, was fined $25 Thursday when a company official pleaded guilty to installing oil burning equipment without applying for the required permit.

B.C. Firms Process Ore To Limit

The provincial cabinet has set 12½ per cent as the maximum percentage of a mine's ore production which the minister of mines can order shipped to a B.C. processing plant under the Mineral Processing Act passed at the last legislative session.

The act as originally passed allows the government to order up to 50 per cent of production but the lower level is contained in regulations set by the cabinet and made public Friday afternoon.

Mines Minister Frank Richter said the 12½ per cent limit was planned all along and does not represent a concession to Lornex copper mining officials who complained that the 50 per cent limit could upset a deal to ship copper to Japan for processing there.

The regulations also give the provincial cabinet authority to control export sales of ore for processing outside the province and specify that a contract for delivery of ore to a B.C. processing plant under order of the government cannot be altered during its term.

The cabinet order states that the regulations are made "notwithstanding that there is no smelter in the province" but in the hope that a smelter will be established before long.

CLINICAL LSD NOT LINKED TO DEFECTS

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — There is no medical evidence to justify reports that clinical use of the drug LSD produces chromosome damage, a cause of birth defects, says a British Columbia research team in a report released Friday.

The report, compiled following tests at Hollywood Hospital, stresses it applies only to the use of clinical LSD (lysergic acid diethylamide-25) and warns that the possibility of chromosomal breakage being caused by use of "illicit" drugs needs further study.

Damage-Free Pipeline Not Guaranteed

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) —Interior Secretary Walter Hickel told the Alaskan legislature Friday he could not be absolutely certain an 800-mile long oil pipeline across the state would do no damage.

In a question-and-answer session with the state's legislators, Hickel said "no man on earth can guarantee 100 per cent of anything."

But he said the pipeline "can be built for safety above ground."

Hickel answered questions instead of delivering a speech prepared for his first appearance before the legislature since he served as Alaska's governor.

Hickel's prepared speech said he would issue the pipeline construction permit "only after a thorough engineering and design analysis."

The speech said he would not approve a design based on the "old and faulty concept of 'build now, repair later.' "

SOME HAVE DOUBTS

Several conservation groups have been skeptical of Hickel's contention that the pipeline would not damage the ecology of the Alaskan tundra. The line would carry heated oil, and some fear the warmth would unbalance the Arctic environment.

The pipeline would stretch from Prudhoe Bay on the North Slope to Valdez in south-central Alaska.

Minister Denounces 'Lazy' Youth

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's transport minister Joe Borowsky lashed out Friday night at a proposed youth hostel in a former old-age home in the Greater Winnipeg municipality of Old Kildonan.

"It's wrong to build youth hostels for middle-class clowns who are too lazy to work, and it's disgraceful to see our parks littered with kids," the minister told a New Democratic party banquet.

The hostel, proposed by education minister Saul Miller, has been protested by Old Kildonan council and taxpayers. The minister has suggested the former sunset lodge as the site for the hostel.

Mr. Boroski told the banquet that he was more concerned about the people "who build this country" than the youth problem.

Ancient Tomb Found

MOSCOW (AP) — The remains of an ancient man clothed in gold from head to foot have been dug up by Soviet archeologists in Soviet central Asia, Tass reported. Archeologists believe the tomb dates from the 4th or 5th century BC. The man has been tentatively classed as a member of the Saka tribe, probably the ancestors of the modern Soviet Kazakhs who live on the Chinese border.

Saskatchewan Celebration A Mecca for Prairie Folk

Saskatchewan will always be a Mecca for hundreds of people formerly of the prairie province who can't forget the long golden plains and the vast blue sky.

And next year, like Arabs, thousands will make a major pilgrimage to the land of their birth to attend homecoming celebrations.

* * *

The event is sponsored jointly by the Saskatchewan department of industry and commerce and the Saskatchewan Tourist Association.

Irvin and Diane Kroeker, a young Regina couple who arrived in Victoria today to tell former prairie folks of the arrangements being planned for them, said the Homecoming 71 Celebrations is one of the most unique events ever planned by a province.

"Its their community and family reunion," they said. "About 200 towns and village committees have already been organized and each will sponsor a special reunion day in its own area."

They said a calendar covering these special days throughout the province would be published by the homecoming committee later this year.

There would also be provincial events, such as the 1971 Canada Winter Games to be held at Saskatoon in February, they said.

A 300-foot mountain is being built on the prairie just south of the city for the skiing portion of the games.

* * *

The Kroekers expected many prairie people now living in Victoria to be in Saskatchewan next year.

"Last year we sent out letters to our residents asking for addresses and names of friends or relatives who have moved out of the province," they said. "We received 135,000 replies covering about 400,000 people. Fifty per cent of these are living in B.C., mostly all concentrated in Victoria or Vancouver."

Waldie, 3549 Cardiff Place, became the bride of Mr. Robert Leslie Young, Vancouver, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Young of Kingstown, St. Vincent Island, British West Indies; formerly of Kimberley, B.C. Her only jewelry, a single strand of pearls, was a gift of the groom. Mrs. Peter Graham, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Barbara Ross, niece of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. They wore identical dresses, floor-length pale yellow silk ottoman, banded at the waist with white lace, featuring a flat bow at the back. "Complete Real Estate Service Across Canada"

ON VIEWING PROPERTIES

Some people feel that they are imposing on a real estate salesman if he takes them to visit a number of homes, especially if they do not see just what they want. There are two reasons why this is not correct. In the first place, buyers seldom have a complete understanding of their real wants even though they have given a lot of thought to the problem. These ideas change as they see what is available, and this process of educating and buyer can result in greater satisfaction.

Secondly, when the salesman views the house with the buyer, he quickly learns what the buyer wants and can do a good job of finding the home to suit.

If the buyer inspects the home on his own, he will attain the first result, but not the second.

Work WITH your salesman so he can do a good job for you.

TV Network's Part In Invasion Plot Bared

By WILLIAM CHAPMAN

WASHINGTON (WP) — It sounds at first like a comic-opera cross-pollination of James Bond and Marshall McLuhan. For example:

Under the eye of a Columbia Broadcasting System camera, a Haitian exile priest calmly describes his plot to bomb the palace of his homeland's dictator, Francois Duvalier, when the great invasion takes place.

•

A cameraman assigned to the filming gets worried and promptly contacts the FBI and the Central Intelligence Agency.

The CBS expert on gun-smuggling and Carribean invasion plans turns out to be an informant for the CIA while he is accepting about 6400 dollars in fees from the network.

One of the prospective invaders loses an eye when his training rifle explodes — on camera — and he later extracts a 15,000 dollar damage settlement from CBS, which already has paid his medical bills.

These and assorted other bizarre details emerged recently from a House commerce subcommittee's investigation of the CBS role in an alleged plot to invade Haiti in 1966 and 1967.

•

Congressmen accused network executives, among other things, of manufacturing news events, meddling in foreign affairs, and possibly urging others to commit criminal acts. The resulting film was never aired.

"This is another instance of creating news and encouraging a criminal act," declared Rep. Paul G. Rogers (D—Fla.). "This was an inspired invasion to get some documentary film."

CBS news vice-president William L. Leonard and Perry Wolff, an executive news producer, insisted the episode was an aborted foray into investigative reporting that flopped. "We never staged anything," insisted Leonard.

It began in 1966 when a CBS producer-reporter, Jay McMullen, set out to film a gun-smuggling report and ran into a supposed plot by exile Cubans and Haitains to invade Haiti. He filmed shots of exiles plotting around a dinner table, of guns being transported to Miami, and of the "invaders" being trained to shoot ancient rifles somewhere in Florida.

The subcommittee, which has held secret hearings before, claimed many of those filmed have testified they received payments for their parts and were considered "employees" of CBS.

•

According to Rep. John E. Moss (D—Calif.), McMullen's assistant on the job, Anthony St. George, testified in closed session that there was an understanding the refugees filmed could be paid in cash.

The CBS executives replied some of the men were paid normal cash "releases" for being filmed, that CBS did pay consultant fees to an arms dealer named Mitchell Werbell, and financed a 1500 dollar trip to the Dominican Republic for some refugees and a film crew.

But, asked if CBS paid money to promote an invasion it could film, Leonard replied firmly, "No, sir."

Besides, Leonard replied, the project was canceled and the film never broadcast. He had written a memo in late 1966 declaring that it all amounted merely to the "non-adventures of a rag-tag crew that would even make Duvalier look good."

•

The network executives were criticized for playing along with what might have been an invasion of another country from American soil, contrary to U.S. foreign policy. Leonard said he had understood that certain people in the U.S. government were aware of the invasion corps anyway.

Outisde the hearing room later, McMullen, the producer, told reporters that some scenes had indeed been faked by his assistant, St. George, whom he had promptly fired. He insisted also that the government must have known something of the affair because the Georgia arms dealer, Werbell, was discovered to be in touch with the CIA in Miami.

However, Moss insisted he had discovered that the CIA knew nothing of the operation.

•

"When news becomes such a valuable commodity that it has to be manufactured and involves relations with other countries, it breaches any bounds of reasonableness," Moss declared.

Rogers added: "I'm convinced that CBS helped to stage this, after listening to the evidence."

CAHA Is Shifting Office to Ottawa

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association is moving its national office to Ottawa.

In making the announcement Friday, CAHA president Earl Dawson said it is expected the association will be one of several sport governing bodies to be housed under one roof in Ottawa through the assistance of the fitness and amateur sport directorate under Health Minister John Munro.

National headquarters of the CAHA was established in August, 1967, with the first office in Winnipeg.

"It is hoped the national office, after an invitation from the federal government . . . will be located by Sept. 1, 1970, so as to be ready for the beginning of the 1970-71 season," Dawson said.

The association's three permanent employees will move to Ottawa. They are executive director Gordon Juckes, development co-ordinator Ken Mantin and administrative assistant Pierre Turmel.

Officials expect the move to result in a saving of about $40,000 a year.

Mr. Munro last month announced a new sport policy whereby the federal government, through the fitness and amateur sport directorate, would assist sport governing bodies in the field of administration.

This assistance is to take the form of providing a building in Ottawa with adequate office space, financial assistance for administration and other forms of help.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Icelanders Successful Settlers

By BOB BOWMAN

Among the most successful settlers who ever came to Canada were the Icelanders, who arrived in Manitoba on April 25, 1875. An eruption of the volcano Mount Hecla had made many people in Iceland homeless, and Governor-General Lord Dufferin, who knew Iceland well, suggested that they should come to Canada.

The first party arrived in 1873 and settled in the Muskoka Lakes area of Ontario. It was followed by others in 1874 who went to Kinmount, Ontario,, and also Mooseland Heights, Nova Scotia.

Although the Muskoka Lakes are now a wonderful summer playground, the Icelanders were not happy there and Reverend John Taylor led them to Lake Winnipeg which was then north of the Manitoba boundary. They found an ideal location at Willow Point which they renamed Gimli, an Icelandic name meaning "Paradise." Fish were plentiful, and so were trees to provide lumber for building. There were beautiful white sand beaches.

Other Icelanders followed until 1887 which was a banner year for settlement. Then some of the Gimli people left to found new colonies in Winnipeg, Selkirk and other parts of the Northwest.

The Icelanders brought few possessions with them but they had a great love of language and literature. They learned to speak English more quickly than any other race. Many of them could speak fluently in six months without a trace of accent.

When Manitoba was made into a province in 1870, it was bilingual, meaning English and French. Nine years later it was multi-lingual, with the arrival of the Icelanders and also 6,000 German-speaking Mennonites. The Mennonites were given land, religious freedom, and exemption from military service.

Other events on April 25:

1679 — Governor of Canada was authorized to issue hunting permits.

1849 — Tory supporters burned parliament buildings in Montreal protesting against Rebellion Losses Bill.

1858 — First miners for Fraser River gold rush arrived at Victoria, B.C.

1875 — Red River rebels granted amnesty except Riel, Lepine and O'Donoghue.

1900 — Canadians fought in South African War battle of Israel's Poort.

1910 — Quebec ban on export of pulpwood brought protest from U.S.A.

1940 — Women in Quebec granted right to vote and be members of legislature.

1959 — St. Lawrence Seaway was opened to navigation although not officially opened until June 26.

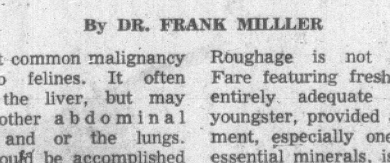
The Wonderful World of Animals



By DR. FRANK MILLLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: W're getting the pick of a litter of puppies but we don't know that much about picking the best one. We don't plan on showing it or anything like that, we just want the pup with the liveliest personality. How do we go about picking the right one on just one, short, visit. Our friends have one lined up to suggest to us, but how could we go about picking our own?—D.M.

DEAR D.M.: Litter owners should be in the best position to pick your personality — plus pup. However, here's one technique for picking the peppiest people-oriented pup: Carry all the puppies into a strange room and slowly walk away from them. The one who follows most closely would probably be the most dependent — not the right choice for you. Look for one who tools off on his own and immediately finds something to play with. The playtime pup's likely to provide personality plus and will probably keep things popping around the old homestead long after puppyhood is past.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: My cat died because of a cancer called lyphosarcoma of the liver. Is this something which occurs often enough so one should watch for it? — D.B.

DEAR D. B.: Unfortunately, lymphosarcoma occurs frequently in the cat, being the most common malignancy fatal to felines. It often affects the liver, but may invade other abdominal organs and or the lungs. Little would be accomplished by watching for it. Recognition by external signs is impossible, anyway. Going from the specific to the general, good cat care involves preventive medicine. Routine vaccinations and checkups are the best bets for keeping a cat healthy. Best care inclues top nutrition, a friendly environment, plus knowing your cat well enough to spot early signs of illness.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: How often does a young hawk have to be fed? I have heard they have to have a lot of roughage for the digestion to work. Can they survive without it? I can't seem to come up with any mice or little birds to feed them. — M. L.

DEAR M.L.: Young hawks should be fed at least five or six times a day. As with most young birds, a hawk burns up fuel at a terrific pace. Roughage is not required. Fare featuring fresh flesh is entirely adequate for the youngster, provided a supplement, especially one rich in essential minerals, is added.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: My son caught this house mouse in some sort of pit trap and has since made a pet of him. I'm continually amazed by how much Brown Eyes can eat. How can such a tiny mite eat so much? — G. T.

DEAR G. T.: Primarily because he has to keep body and (mouse) soul together. Metabolic rate is measured by the amount of oxygen consumed, so we have a basis for comparison. When man and (house) mouse are both lounging around the house, just resting, the "mitey" mouse is burning up oxygen per gram of body weight 15 times faster than does the human. Caloric requirements are in proportion, so you can see Brown Eyes has to stow it away to stick around.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: What would robins feed their young if they couldn't find any earth worms? We're expecting our friends to be raising another family this spring but have seen very few worms. — D.M.

DEAR D. M.: While robins relish earthworms, they can and do choose a varied diet. Other animal food includes caterpillars, various beetles, flies, sowbugs, spiders, termites, and even centipedes and millipedes. Plant food is variable, too, depending upon the part of the country and the season. Soft fruits are always relished, be they cherries, straw and other berries, grapes, etc. Other appreciated plants include sumac, blackgum, dogwood,

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is it possible for a puppy to get high and get hallucinations while on pot? A friend says his puppy gets high just from inhaling the smoke. Does he imagine this? — R. R.

DEAR R. R.: Your friend might imagine almost anything . . . at times. But it's unlikely the puppy does. At least not unless the smoke-filled room's even thicker than most. But a pup on pot, who has chomped down a joint or two, could get high. How high is hard to say. Halucinations? Pups appear to, though to what degree it is difficult to determine. (Keep in mind marijuana can make a puppy deathly ill, so trips are not recommended.)

Quebec Liberal Chief Scorns Old Approaches

By GERARDA LARIE

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert Bourassa, head of the Quebec Liberal party since January, scorns the traditional format of provincial election campaigns which he describes as "a policy of road patching, hospital expansion and bridge building."

Touring the province in his campaign for the April 29 general election, the 36-year-old leader says he is presenting a "responsible electoral program."

"For us, the era of promises of all types is over," he said in unveiling the Liberal electoral platform at a news conference in Montreal.

Mr. Bourassa is said to be bitter over the fact that the Union Nationale government, in searching for a new mandate, has pledged to build a trans-Quebec highway costing billions of dollars, to launch a $50,000,000 road rebuilding program in eastern Quebec and to reduce taxes.

All this, he says, from a government that in the last four years has shown signs of "immobility."

COUNT ON QUEBECERS

"We are in 1970 and we are counting on the fact that Quebecers are responsible enough not to fool themselves."

What he wants, simply, is a government "that can count."

And in that category, the successor to Jean Lesage boasts some strong credentials. He completed his study of economics at Harvard and Oxford universities.

Mr. Bourassa is the son of a man who made his career in the Quebec civil service. He was born in Montreal's Mercier riding which first elected him to the Quebec national assembly in the 1966 general election.

BOURASSA
. . . relative newcomer

He was encouraged to become a candidate by Rene Levesque, then a Liberal cabinet minister who later bolted the party to form the separatist Parti Quebecois.

Earlier, at the age of 30, Mr. Bourassa was secretary of a provincial royal commission of inquiry into Quebec's financial situation.

Quebec politicians described him as a determined and ambitious man.

On this latter description, his wife Andree, wealthy daughter of one of the founders of Marine Industries Ltd. in Sorel, Que., comments:

"When we say that someone is ambitious, this is a moral judgment of a person and I myself, when speaking of Robert, prefer to describe him as one who surpasses himself."

Robert Bourassa does not strike the pose of a power-manipulating political person.

EMPHASIS ECONOMIC

Campaign organizers speak of his ability to engage in intimate dialogues with his audience, a quality that echoes the style of Prime Minister Trudeau.

In school basements which can contain up to 500 persons he often invites listeners to question him about relevant issues.

The Liberal election platform is essentially one of economic development.

Mr. Bourassa has promised the creation of 100,000 new jobs by 1971, a reorganization of the provincial health and welfare departfent and other social services into a department of social affairs and a new tax structure.

One of his often-used quotes is "federalisme rentable"— Quebec can profit from federalism.

This is a departure from the policies of both the governing Union Nationale and the Parti Quebecois which feel the province is unfairly treated within Confederation.

Gaglardi Says Tax Paper Dangerous

PENTICTON — Social Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi Friday lescribed the federal white paper on tax reform as a dangerous and frightening document.

Gaglardi made the charge in a speech to the 26th annual convention of the Canadian Plumbing and Mechanical Contractors' Association.

"If the recommendations of the white paper are ever implemented, then God help us all," he said. "The recommendations would without doubt destroy a vital segment of society.

WIPED OUT'

"Those of you in this room who call yourselves small businessmen would be wiped out within a year. The situation is extremely dangerous and the future frightening.

"Already the effects of this dangerous document are being felt in Canda in the investment world where people are taking a wait-and-see attitude before committing funds to development."

In his rambling address Gaglardi took a sharp critical swing at the press of western Canada.

"I was reading a few days ago of their defence of Prime Minister Trudeau's use of a jet aircraft," Gaglardi said. "Where were they when I needed them?"

'THE EAST IS RED' SINGS RED SATELLITE

China Rockets Into Space Club

Times News Services

HONG KONG — China announced today the launching of its first earth satellite and it is circling the earth every 114 minutes.

The North American Air Defence Command headquarters in Colorado Springs, Col., confirmed the launch and said the satellite is flying regularly over the United States.

The launch indicated China now has the capability of building and delivering intercontinental ballistic missiles.

A brief communique from Peking said the satellite was launched Friday and it is playing a recorded revolutionary song "The East is Red" circles the world.

With the successful launch, China joins the United States, Russia, France and japan in the space club. Canada has orbitted satellites but only by using American-made rockets.

★

China became the world's fifth nuclear power in 1964 and test-fired its first nuclear-tipped guided missile Oct. 27, 1966. Its first H-bomb test was carried out Jun 17, 1967.

The official New China news agency said the 381-pound satellite broadcasts its music at a frequency of 20.009 megacycles.

The agency said the satellite's orbit ranges from 273 miles to 1,480 miles above the earth at an angle to the equator of 68.5 degrees.

"The successful launching of the satellite marks a good beginning in the development of China's space technology," the agency added. "It is a great victory for Mao Tse-tung thought ... and another fruitful result of the great cultural revolution."

The announcement of the launching gave no further technical details, nor did it say where the satellite was launched or with what type rocketry.

★

The launching is likely to add to worries in the West over China's already known capability to produce nuclear weapons. The question for some time has been how the Chinese would deliver them to a target.

The words of the satellite's song, familiar on Radio Peking, are:

The East is red. The sun rises,

Mao Tse-tung comes out in the East.

He works for the well-being of the people

He is the great saviour of the people.

Chairman Mao, he loves the people.

He is the man leading our way.

He leads us forward.

The Communist party is like the sun.

It brightens where it shines.

When China has the Communist party, her people are liberated.

EX-TAX INVESTIGATOR JAILED FOR EVASION

MONTREAL (CP) — J. Raoul Lacombe, 48, former chief investigator in Montreal for the federal income tax branch, Friday was sentenced to six months in jail for tax evasion.

Lacombe, with 23 years' service in the tax department, was sentenced by Judge Maurice Rousseau for failing to declare his income properly over a six-year period.

He is free on $1,000 bond pending appeal.

Evidence established he had under-reported $11,813 income on his returns from 1961 to 1966.

GUNDERSON ROLE?

B.C. Firm Said Fighting Grab

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Friday that directors of NWL Financial Corporation are trying to prevent a Bahamas-based firm from taking over the Vancouver company.

Einar Gunderson, Social Credit party fund-raiser and long-time friend of Premier Bennett, is one of those attempting to prevent a takeover, Peterson said in an interview.

Peterson said there is no connection between Gunderson and the Bahamas company.

The government was aware that Residential Resort had bought into NWL prior to Opposition Leader Dave Barrett's disclosure of the move Thursday, Peterson said.

'NOT SISTER'

The attorney-general appeared to deny Barrett's description of Residential Resort as a "sister company" of Consolidated Benguet Corp., the Bahamas company declared unacceptable in the Cypress Bowl development earlier this month by Peterson.

Barrett had raised the question of whether an attempt was being made to turn NWL into a "front" company to take over from Benguet in the development of leased crown land in the West Vancouver bowl.

Peterson also dismissed Barrett's call for a judicial inquiry into the controversial recreational development which mushroomed into a huge residential proposal when Benguet took over a B.C. company last fall to become the developers.

The development was suspended by the government Nov. 26 after a storm of controversy over Benguet's reputation which was clouded by a 1967 Bahamian royal commission investigation indicating the company's involvement in payoffs to government officials in connection with casino operations.

Peterson said his department has full details of the organizational structure of Residential Resort as a result of that company's application in February to the U.S. Securities Commission.

Benguet isn't involved in this matter," Peterson said of the NWL case.

He said he had a meeting Wednesday with Peter G. Ropchan, president of NWL Financial corporation, on the subject of the acquisition of 38 per cent of NWL shares by the Freepont firm.

On the question of Gunderson's directorship in NWL, Peterson said:

STILL NO SPOTS ON MATTINGLY

HOUSTON (AP) — The man who was taken off the Apollo 13 moon flight because of an exposure to the German measles never came down with the disease, doctors said today.

Thomas K. Mattingly, the prime command module pilot on Apollo 13, was forced off the flight a day before launch because he was exposed to the German measles by a backup crew member.

'Secret' Towboat Report Condemns Vessels, Crew

VANCOUVER (CP) — A federal government report on the British Columbia towboat industry says 80 per cent of west coast tugboats and half the men who man them are constantly exposed to unsatisfactory and dangerous conditions.

Copies of the report, plainly labelled "secret" on its front cover, were released Friday night to reporters by members of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, which obtained access to it earlier in the week.

It was prepared by four federal civil servants: R. H. Elfstrom, B. W. Dodd, and D. S. Tysoe of the labor department and H. O. Buchanan of the transport department.

50 VESSELS

The committee surveyed 50 vessels of the 313 operated by British Columbia Towboat Owners' Association member companies. Its report comprises 26 pages plus 14 pages of appendices, but does not name individual companies or vessels.

The report is critical of working conditions, inadequate living comditions on vessels and badly or inadequately trained crews operating in conditions of carelessness condoned by masters.

It cites as contributing to dangerous operation: excessive hours, unsafe practices, inadequate crew quarters, poor feeding and sanitary arrangements, and dangers arising from basically unsafe design of some tugboats.

The investigators looked at towboats in three categories: under 10 tons, 10 to 15 tons, over 15 tons. They said the danger to crews decreased as the size of the tugs rose.

Officers and crew members on two- to five-man vessels, particularly to those operating on the Strait of Georgia, frequently work from 14 to 18 hours a day, "and often up to 20 hours a day with the remaining time broken into several short off-duty periods."

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — President Francois Duvalier claimed today that a mutiny in the Haitian Coast Guard was "completely under control" but he kept the airport closed in the island nation's capital city and refused telephone calls from the United States.

The airport was closed and telephone communications shut down Friday after mutineers fired on the capital from three coast guard vessels.

The coast guard vessels apparently tried to shell Duvalier's palace. One person was injured and several homes damaged, the government said.

Ottawa Joins Quebec Fray

Polls Show Separatists Gaining

Times News Services

QUEBEC—The federal government entered Quebec's election campaign through the back door Friday, spurred to action by the spectre of significant separatist gains in next Wednesday's balloting.

A newsletter, published by the Quebec wing of the Liberal Party of Canada and clearly inspired if not written by Ottawa, was distributed Friday. It indicates that Quebec derives more from confederation than it contributes.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who outwardly has avoided entry into the Quebec campaign, is believed to feel that the apparent rise of the separatist Parti Quebecois is based more on a protest against existing conditions than on any wave of true separatist feeling.

But newspaper polls published this week take some of the credulity from that stance.

MOMENTUM SEEN

Results of separate surveys published today in three Montreal papers, while discounted by some observers as not likely to reflect next week's vote results accurately, do show the separatist movement is gaining momentum.

All three show Robert Bourassa's Liberal party taking the largest segment of the popular vote, followed closely by Rene Levesque's Parti Quebecois. And all placed the Union Nationale goevrnment party third, in a position the Montreal Star describes as "close to political collapse."

OUTWARD CALM

One reason for Ottawa's outward calm about the turn of public feeling in Quebec reportedly is the prime minister's contention that this election is not a clear-cut referendum on separatism.

And another is the very plausible belief that a direct entry into the campaign by Ottawa could damage the

MONTREAL (CP) — A separatist dollar has been put into circulation by the Liberals.

The dollar bill, known in French as "la piastre a Levesque"—the Levesque buck—has been published by the Liberal election organization in Chambly riding.

The Levesque buck is the same color as a Canadian dollar bill but it is about one-third blank to indicate the price of separation.

The Queen's portrait has been replaced by a sketch of Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois.

Trapped Cambodians Fight Red Advance

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Hand-to-hand fighting raged around the important Cambodian highway town of Angtassom, 42 miles south of Phnom Penh today and a military spokesman said a Communist attack was repulsed.

Cambodian soldiers there said 10 of their number were killed and eight wounded.

Communist units are between the Cambodian troops and the town, in which a reinforced Cambodian battalion is trapped.

The fighting in Angtassom threatens Takeo, a provincial capital six miles to the southeast, which has been under siege for nearly a week.

Meanwhile, Cambodian navy landing boats began towing about 100 houseboats down the Bassac River southeast of Phnom Penh with the Vietnamese occupants aboard. Police told the Vietnamese they would be taken to a safer area.

Israelis Bombed By Egypt, Syria

Both Egyptian and Syrian planes were active today in the Middle East.

A flight of Egyptian bombers penetrated to within 90 miles of Tel Aviv, only the second time since the 1967 war that they have hit so close to the Israeli capital. Four Syrian planes attacked an emplacement on the occupied Golan Heights.

A Tel Aviv spokesman said Israeli interceptors shot down two Egyptian Ilyushin 28s, first of their kind downed since the Middle East war began.

One Last Crash of Rifles as the Queen's Own Dies

By PAT DUFOUR

The drums, emblazoned with the regiment's battle honors, are marched on parade for the last time. The rifles held by the stern-faced soldiers crash in a final feu de joie.

Canada's oldest regiment dies.

Today in a ceremony at Work Point Barracks, the officers and men of the 1st Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, stand tall.

They celebrate the 110th birthday of their beginning on April 26, 1860.

They anticipate another beginning.

Monday, in an official ceremony the QORs become the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

At today's ceremony, outward signs of emotion are absent.

It is tonight, in the messes, that the Queen's Own will mourn their own passing.

In 1860 six rifle companies joined to become Canada's first militia rifle regiment. Those were the days of Canada's national birth pangs and the militia was to take the place of the departed British troops.

• • •

They were a dedicated lot and when they received their first blooding, fighting the Fenians in the Battle of Ridgeway, June 2, 1866, they were ready-equipped with valor, humor and loyalty.

Sir William Mulock, a sergeant at that battle, wrote of an incident that centred around the adjutant, a certain Capt. W. D. Otter, who was later to become Canada's first general.

The adjutant was fond of dashing around on his horse which one day shied, depositing him in the middle of a creek.

As the bedraggled officer scrambled out, a nearby rifleman remarked, sotto voce, "I've been here three days and that's the first dam',otter I've seen in this creek!"

It was this spirit that kept the men going as they trudged northward in 35-below weather to take their part in crushing the Northwest Rebellion.

Sir Henry Mill Pellatt, whose old home, Casa Loma, still stands as an historical site in central Toronto, was commanding officer when the regiment reached its 50th anniversary in 1910.

• • •

He decided to celebrate in style and financed a trip to England for the men. The aim was to show Britain that Canada stoody ready at her side.

Toronto city council insured all the men while they were overseas. While the officers were expected to finance their own keep, riflemen were paid 25 cents a day, non-commissioned officers received an extra dime.

Today's commanding officer, Lt.-Col. Thorold Marsaw, is proud that the QORs were the first Canadian troops to see action in the First World War. The regiment was to have seven battalions over there before it was over.

The brought home six Victoria Crosses and 368 other decorations.

In the Second World War, Sgt. Aubrey Cosens was to become the regiment's seventh VC. He died shortly after he and the four remaining members of his platoon captured a vital position at the village of Mooshof in Holland on Feb. 26, 1945.

The battle honors of the regiment trace its path through the struggles of northwest Canada, and those of South Africa in 1899 and 1900, to 20 pitched stands during the First World War, and 19 hard-fought battles in the Second World War, beginning with the testing at Normandy.

Marsaw says "I'm rather anxious to encourage my people to start picking Patricias."

To this end, he's created a "brain-washing" room in the mess where officers can get familiar with the ways and traditions of the regiment to which they'll now belong.

He says the Patricia's executive have been zealous in efforts to welcome their new battalion.

"They've bought a new belt-buckle with their insignia, for every officer and man—and our cadets as well. They've also given us a loan to help finance the new red uniforms we'll now have to wear."

Red uniforms! The QORs have always worn forest green. Always the vanguard of the infantry, the forest green made them harder targets for snipers.

For the same reason, the QORs have never carried colors.

Used as a rallying point, they would have been a dead give-away to the enemy.

Instead they relied on drums, or more often a horn, which. in time of action, controlled the skirmishers.

Marsaw asserts that the disbanding of his regiment, along with the Black Watch and the Canadian Guards, is a good thing for his officers and men.

"With Canada's regiments reduced from six to three, the regimental family is bigger and the opportunities for the right men to become leaders, greater."

What of his men? Do they echo his sentiments?

In time they may, but now the wrench is too hard, too close.

Cpl. Joe Hickey, with 11½ years under his QOR belt buckle, says:

"If they're going to wipe out one unit, why don't they make a clean sweep of it and give us all numbers—from one to 10?"

A veteran of 19 years with the regiment, Sgt. Dan McAllister is more guarded.

He agrees with the colonel that he and his comrades have a job to do, irrespective of what regimental badge they wear.

But, he adds, "The QORs have always had a good name—from the Lakehead out to here."

He pauses for a while, draws another breath:

"It's going to be pretty hard for some of us old sweats to slow down from 140 to 120 paces."

• • •

The QORs march much faster than other regiments, the significance being that, as advance troops, they had no time to loiter on the way to battle, and had to move fast when returning to the main force.

Another corporal tells a significant story.

"As far as accepting Patricia history—in the Christmas holidays someone sent a picture of Lady Patricia Ramsay to the mess. It was flung out the window and was soon floating around the bay."

He, too, makes a reluctant concession to reality.

"Give us another year—and it should be easier."

Marsaw admits that today is one of mixed emotions.

"We don't want to see a tear."

The final testing comes Monday when General C. B. Ware arrives from Kingston, Ont.

Honorary Colonel of the Patricias, Ware will take part in a ceremony at the main gate.

• • •

There the queen's Own Rifles sign will come down, to be bundled along with other regimental treasures, and sent to the Toronto armories where the QORs militia will start a museum.

A new sign will take its place.

The officers and men at Work Point will gradually learn to absorb the traditions of the name on the new sign.

But tonight is different.

It will be spent reminiscing, recalling old pals and other days.

Perhaps the words that spurred them on in those other days will be sung:

Holding all the old traditions
Sanctioned by the Queen,
We've won glory through the ages
With the rifle green.

Lift the chorus, beat it onward,
Proudly swell the tone:
Hail to thee, our Mother Regiment,
Hail, O Hail, Queen's Own.

Vic West Residents Push for New School

Recent publicity over conditions at Monterey elementary has spurred efforts by Victoria West residents to get a new school in their area.

A parents meeting is to be held in the school next week to discuss possible ways of getting government action.

FIRST PRIORITY

Parents and pupils have also written to Education Minister Donald Brothers asking why Victoria West elementary, Great Victoria school board's number one priority, was passed over in favor of Monterey.

Some Vic West parents complained earlier this week that release of $224,000 for Monterey was discrimination against their childern's needs.

Vic West elementary, built in 1908, has 500 pupils.

FIRE HAZARD

The high-ceilinged old building is cold and drafty, heated by wood and coal furnace, is a fire hazard, lacks gymnasium and sickroom, has inadequate wiring and washrooms.

One parent, Mrs. Marjorie Moeskau, said parents should take their plea directly to Brothers.

Monterey PTA president John Harris said Friday he would support Vic West parents in their fight to get a new school.

OCEAN CEMENT CLOSES

Trades Lockout Forces Shutdown

One major supplier of building materials and ready mixed concrete shut down its Vancouver Island outlets Friday night and another will follow suit Monday to avoid operating at a loss during a province-wide lockout of tradesmen by the construction industry.

Victoria manager Lloyd J. Glassford of Ocean Cement Ltd. said the reason was "pretty self-evident with most of the general contractors affected" by the Construction Labor Relations Association lockout of seven building trades here and eight on the mainland.

"The lockout has meant a drop off in our business to the point where we can't afford to keep our doors open. It was strictly a matter of economics," Glassford said.

Butler-Lafarge Ltd. president Ted Crampton said his company will cease its gravel and ready mix operations on the Island simply because "cement supplies have ceased to come."

Crampton added that the company's retail outlets will remain open in Victoria, Duncan and Nanaimo.

LAYING OFF

Glassford explained that construction material demand had been diminishing in the 11 days since seven unions were first locked out and that the company had been laying men off gradually.

In the past two weeks Ocean Cement laid off 50 hourly-paid workers in Victoria and 15 in Nanaimo, reducing the staff to none at quitting time Friday.

Victoria manager Ed Phillips, of Amalgamated Construction Association, said the shutdown by Ocean Cement would cut off more of the "spotty construction that's been going on these past 10 days."

CARPENTERS

The unions, represented through B.C.-Yukon and Vancouver Island Building Trades Councils, were relying on a no-picketing agreement in order to keep construction job sites open to those trades that are not locked out. Of these, the carpenters are the largest and most influential group with some 9,000 members in B.C.

But their contract expires Thursday, after which they could strike or be locked out following 72-hour statutory notice.

This would add a significant number of idle workers to those which the unions up to now have claimed to be marginal.

The locked out unions are teamsters, laborers, tunnel and rock workers, operating engineers, bricklayers and helpers, cement finishers and insulators, plus plumbers up-Island and on the mainland.

Hydro Cost Story 'Unreasonable' Say Engineers

B.C. Hydro's figures comparing costs of putting transmission lines overhead and underground present an "unreasonable" picture of a local issue, says the Vancouver Island branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada.

It is the branch's second statement to the Times in opposition to three miles of steel poles 75 feet high B.C. Hydro proposes along Interurban and Burnside Roads to carry 132,000-volt transmission lines.

"The members of this branch of the Institute submit that this cost comparison is unreasonable," says the letter from chairman P. W. E. Campbell.

ADDITIONAL COST

"When compared with the $30 to $35 million cost of generating and transmitting power from Jordan River to the Greater Victoria area, the additional cost of installing underground wiring (say from the George Tripp substation to the Horsey substation) is in the order of $940,000 more.

"In this context the additional cost comes to approximately 3 per cent of the total project."

The branch joins residents along the proposed line of towers in condemning the overhead lines as an ugly clutter and notes 10 miles of underground wiring is currently being completed in Vancouver through what is essentially a residential area, similar to the one which would be affected in Victoria.

NOT INDUSTRIAL

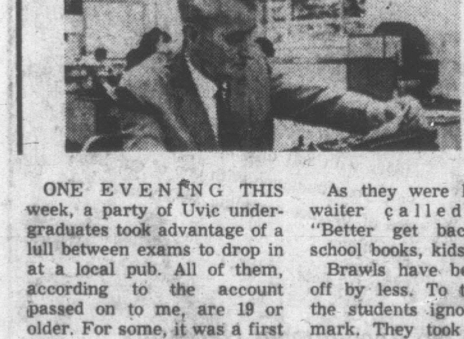
"The contrast is intensified when one considers that Victoria is not an industrial city, but one said by many to be unique in Canada, of great beauty and the capital of British Columbia—and as we are talking about money, a city much concerned with the tourist industry," says Campbell's letter.

He says the branch would like to see the entire three miles of transmission lines placed underground but at the very least the portion between the two substations.

"The additional cost . . . is a relatively small percentage of the allocation for the supply of more power in this area."

As for the five residents of Munns Road who are opposing the line because Hydro plans to expropriate and demolish their homes when they run the line south of Prospect lake, they're getting ready for a public rally in Hampton Park at 3 p.m. Sunday.

P. A. Codyre, spokesman for the group, says he expects up to 5,000 people to attend the meeting in the park near the Burnside-Tillicum intersection.



Arthur Mayse . . .

ONE EVENING THIS week, a party of Uvic undergraduates took advantage of a lull between exams to drop in at a local pub. All of them, according to the account passed on to me, are 19 or older. For some, it was a first testing of their legal right to knock back a beer.

As one of the group lays out the sequence, the students were asked to produce identification, and did so.

But the waiter wasn't satisfied. He wanted to see their birth certificates. They couldn't oblige him. Neither could I under the same circumstances. Some people carry their birth certificates, but a lot of us don't.

The waiter then refused to set 'em up.

The young people kept their cool. There were girls in the party, and anyway, they weren't out for trouble.

As they were leaving, the waiter called to them, "Better get back to your school books, kids."

Brawls have been touched off by less. To their credit, the students ignored the remark. They took themselves off to another sudsery.

"But we were pretty mad," said my informant, "and we're wondering whether this kind of thing is behind some of the beer parlor incidents since drinking age was lowered."

He adds that he and his friends met a different reception of their next stop. They got their beer . . . to which, like it or lump it, they were by law entitled.

IF YOU'VE FED WILD birds in winter — and please don't during the rest of the year when natural food is plentiful — you're familiar with the pert junco.

He or she as the case may be is the two-toned grey one with the black cap.

Last December, Mrs. R. J. Alm of 1619 Ash Road found a junco at the foot of her basement stairs. It had been mauled, apparently by a cat, and was more dead than alive.

Its tail had been ripped out. Most of the feathers were gone from its underbody. One wing was broken, and a foot hung by a shred.

Mrs. Alm took it in, even though she expected it to die at any moment. She fitted a box with a soft lining, and set seeds and water handy.

Amazingly, the bird survived. When it was stronger, Mr. Ash amputated the dangling foot.

Today, full-feathered once more, the Junco occupies a cage in the Alm's house. It won't fly again — the injured wing mended but doesn't function — but it hops about on one foot, and flirts with its reflection in the cage mirror.

"Sometimes we hang the cage outside," says Mrs. Ash "but the bird likes to be where the action is. It sings along with the household appliances."

The junco thrives on oatmeal and budgie seed, plus a daily wedge of orange and a dab of peanut butter.

Some tragedies can't be entirely mended. Pierre, saucily named for the PM, couldn't last a day if turned loose outdoors to fend for himself.

If some other predator didn't snatch him, a cat would.

I'M NOT RECOMMENDING this experiment, mind, but if anyone insists on learning the effects of pollution in a painful and personal way, he has but to eat a bad clam.

A year or so ago, without intent, I put away some steamed little necks from a low-tide beach that looked safe, but wasn't. I paid with a bad night.

The moral, emphasized by British Columbia's commercial fisheries branch, is, look before you dig or gather.

Any flat below a residential area served by septic tanks should be avoided.

"People arent careful enough where they get shellfish," a department spokesman told me. "If you have any reason to think you may be taking a chance on a mess of clams, leave them strictly alone."

Another suggestion even though you may be fond of oysters on the half shell, boil them before frying or serving in a stew unless you're sure they came from a safe area.

It's a pit that such instructions should be required, but failure to observe them can be painful if not downright dangerous.

As I learned, the hard way!

NIGHTS GET LATER: CHANGE YOUR CLOCKS

Spring ahead — fall back.

That's one way to remember which way to twist the clock's hands before going to bed tonight.

Daylight Saving time begins at 2 a.m. Sunday morning and this being spring, move the clock an hour ahead.

You'll lose an hour's sleep — but gain long sunny evenings.

KNICKS BLOW BIG LEAD BUT FINISH WITH RUSH

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Knickerbockers blew a 20-point lead and then reared back on the fourth quarter scoring of Walt Frazier and Cazzie Russell for a 124-112 victory over Los Angeles Lakers Friday in the first game of their best-of-seven series for the National Basketball Association title.

Willis Reed, putting on a tremendous shooting performance from the outside, had led the Knicks to a 50-30 lead in the second quarter and New York led 65-54 at the half, as the big centre out-manoeuvred hobbled Wilt Chamberlain for 25 of his 37 points in the first half.

Chamberlain, limping, and losing some of his mobility after knee surgery that kept him out of 70 regular season games, scored 17 points and took in 24 rebounds while Elgin Baylor had 20 rebounds for the Lakers.

Champs Edge Uplands Pair

Elsie Saunders and Ivy Blunt of Gorge Vale made a good start in defence of their title by capturing medal honors Friday in the qualifying round of the annual Victoria and district women's two-ball foursomes event at Uplands Golf Club.

The Uplands' pairing of Lil Thirlwell and Jean Christie tied the defending champions with a net score of 82½, but the Gorge duo took the medal on the strength of a better score on the back nine.

Jan Smith and Dot Zabel of Uplands shard third place at 83 with Peggy Matthews and Joan Scott of Gorge Vale.

Another stroke back were Phyllis Coxworth and Lorna Rooper of Uplands.

MATCH PLAY MONDAY

Net scores of 85½ or better in the wind-swept, rain-drenched course was needed to qualify for the 16 berths in the championship section of the handicap event, in which partners hit alternate shots.

Match play begins Monday at Victoria Golf Club with the following starting times:

It's Only April but Expos Face Threat of Sad Season

By The Canadian Press

It's not the end of April yet, but it already threatens to become a long baseball season for Montreal Expos of the National League.

The Expos have only one win in 11 starts, and are mired at the bottom of the East Division standings, 7½ games behind the leading Chicago Cubs.

Friday, the Expos engaged in yet another exercise in futility.

Tied 2-2 in the top of the seventh inning against San Francisco Giants, the Montrealers allowed the Giants six runs, and finally stumbled to a 12-3 loss.

Elsewhere, Los Angeles Dodgers took a 1-0 decision from New York Mets in 15 innings, the Cubs whipped Houston Astros 6-3, Philadelphia Phillies squeezed past San Diego Padres 5-4, Atlanta Braves blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 9-0, and St. Louis Cardinals defeated Cincinnati Reds 3-1.

PITCHER STARTS

To add to the Expos' humiliation, the winning rally was touched off by a pitcher, as Gaylord Perry rapped a one-out double off reliever Dan McGinn. Then Bobby Bonds walked on four pitches and Ron Hunt blasted his second homer of the season.

Willie Mays followed with a walk and Ken Henderson cracked a two-out single before Dick Dietz hit his fifth homer of the season off reliever Howie Reed.

Perry wasn't the only pitcher to take matters into his own hands.

St. Louis managed just three hits against Cincinnati's rookie Wayne Simpson, but one of them was a sixth-inning single by pitcher George Culver that touched off a two-run rally and helped the Cards to their victory.

In Chicago, pitcher Ken Holtzman slashed a tie-breaking, two-run double to give the Cubs their eighth straight win.

TAPE-MEASURE BLAST

Frank Howard unloaded in the third inning of Washington Senators 5-3 victory over California Angels, smashing one of the longest home runs in the history of Robert F. Kennedy Stadium.

Howard blasted a pitch by Andy Messersmith down a runway in the upper deck in left field, estimated at more than 500 feet. It was his fourth homer of the season and snapped a 3-3 tie.

Elsewhre in the American League, Baltimore Orioles shaded Kansas City Royals 7-5. Detroit Tigers stopped Minnesota Twins 8-6 and Cleveland Indians whipped the Chicago White Sox 4-1. Milwaukee Bruins at Boston Red Sox and Oakland Athletics at the New York Yankees were rained out.

TIGERS STRETCH STRING

Besides his mammoth homer, Howard started a three-run uprising in the first inning with a two-out walk. Lee Maye of the Senators and the Angels' Roger Repoz slugged homers.

Winning pitcher Dick Bosman also drove in an insurance run with a fourth-inning single.

The surprising Tigers made it eight straight victories, sparked by Bill Freehan's 405-foot, two-run homer and Al Kaline's five consecutive hits—two doubles and three singles.

Freehan snapped a 6-6 tie by powering a pitch from Minnesota reliever Tom Hall into the left field seats in the seventh inning after Jim Northrup walked.

Dick McAuliffe also homered for the Tigers, while Harmon Killebrew connected for the Twins and Brant Alyea drove in four runs with a pair of doubles.
